Chapter 1: Background

IU Anniversaries of the Past

Indiana University has a long tradition of celebrating university milestone anniversaries. In 1889, the university began its tradition of marking “Foundation Day” annually on January 20th. The first of these exercises featured an assembly in the Seminary Square campus chapel comprised of hours of Victorian oratory, a lecture by alumnus and trustee David Banta on the seminary period of the college’s history, and concluded with a student and faculty march from the Seminary Square campus to the Dunn’s Woods campus to continue more oratory. The following year, the first book about IU history was published.

Coming on the heels of the Spanish Influenza pandemic of 1918, IU celebrated its Centennial throughout the spring of 1920. And after overcoming decades of shortages of water, fuel, and funding, the university’s 100th birthday provided university leaders with an opportunity to update alumni records, for graduates to assemble in every county of the state and in major cities across the country, and for a series of events in Bloomington. The university planned “Centennial Week” to coincide with June Commencement and included a parade, a performance by the Centennial Band, a circus, track and field events, and a pageant resembling the Bloomington pageant held in 1916 in honor of the state’s centennial. The Centennial Memorial Fund successfully raised funds for the construction of the first Memorial Stadium, the Indiana Memorial Union, and Memorial Hall, the first dormitory for women. An edited volume, Indiana University, 1820-1920: Centennial Memorial Volume, was published, containing historical articles, addresses from the Centennial Educational Conference, and an account of the Centennial Commencement.

In 1945, the 125th anniversary of the university’s founding occurred in the shadow of World War II and took on the identity of a soul-searching and strategic-visioning exercise. Major celebratory events were intentionally not held because of the ongoing war effort. Postwar planning, veteran’s affairs, women’s education, and how to contribute scientific discoveries to the national defense effort were dominant themes among faculty, staff, student, and alumni discussions about the pressing missions of the university. A formal statement on behalf of IU was presented to the governor and state legislature in “deep appreciation for intelligent planning and constant support...” and a timeline of university history was published in the Indiana Alumni Magazine.

The IU Sesquicentennial (150th Anniversary) in 1970 more than made up for the modest 125th commemoration. Despite IU’s statewide presence since the 1910s, participation in anniversary events was not robust outside of the Bloomington campus until the Sesquicentennial. A diverse program throughout the year included: musical and theatrical productions and exhibitions; academic lectures and conferences; commemorative marketing materials and objects; the publication of a four-volume university history by noted historian Thomas Clark; and the dedication and naming of numerous buildings throughout the university. The programmatic activities were complemented by the most ambitious fundraising campaign yet undertaken at IU—the 150th Birthday Fund. When the books were closed it raised more than $50 million, more than twice the initial goal of the campaign, and funded numerous scholarships and professorships in addition to IU Bloomington buildings: the Musical Arts Center, Art Museum (now Eskenazi Museum of Art), Showalter House, and the new Assembly Hall (now Simon Skjodt Assembly Hall); Indianapolis buildings including University Hospital and Krannert Pavilion, the IU Law School building (now Inlow Hall), Cavanaugh Hall, and a renovation at Riley

Hospital; at IU Northwest the Student Activities Center and a new academic building; and at IU South Bend both Riverside Hall and Northside Hall.

The last major anniversary leading up to the IU Bicentennial was the 175th anniversary held in 1995. A photographic history of the university, the Strategic Directions program launched by President Myles Brand, and the IU Foundation's launch of the $500 million Academic Endowment Campaign were pursued alongside new films, traveling exhibits (including an art exhibit from faculty from all IU campuses), musical productions and compositions, and a statehouse celebration on January 20, 1995. Each of these milestone birthday commemorative programs influenced, to a greater or lesser extent, the considerations about the IU Bicentennial panoply of programs.

Ad Hoc Committee 2008-2010

Early in Michael McRobbie's presidential tenure, IU President Emeritus John Ryan suggested to him that it was not too soon to think about the university's bicentennial—at that point, more than a decade away. President Ryan had overseen the university's 150th anniversary and knew the opportunity a milestone anniversary like this could present for the institution. In 2007, months into his tenure, President McRobbie charged John Applegate, then a presidential fellow, now Executive Vice President, to convene a small group of historians and archivists to discuss broad plans and ideas for the 200th anniversary. In those early discussions, documented artfully by then-presidential speechwriter Susan Moke, one can find the roots of what would become the IU Bicentennial. The small committee recommended a focus on the university's history, a major university-wide fundraising campaign, an emphasis on international relationships and partnerships, coordinated building dedications and groundbreaking, and a strategic planning initiative. The committee also importantly recognized that the Bicentennial should be university-wide in scope to include all campuses and recognized that an "anniversary era" would allow for collaboration with major campus, school, department, and program anniversaries that spanned the 2016-2021 time period. These early conversations recommended that a handful of historical projects—for example, a massive oral history project and several commissioned books about the university—should begin posthaste so that the output of those projects might be useful by the 2020 anniversary date. Between 2010 and 2016 these projects were pursued by the Office of the President in collaboration with the University Archives and were staffed only by volunteers and students.

Bicentennial Strategic Plan and For All Bicentennial Campaign

As was evident in many of the earlier university anniversaries, combining strategic planning and a major fundraising campaign with a milestone anniversary can be very successful. After publication of the IU Principles of Excellence (2008), the New Academic Directions Report (2011), and the regional campus's Blueprint for Student Attainment (2011), President McRobbie charged Executive Vice President John Applegate and each campus chancellor or provost with overseeing the development of five-year university and campus strategic plans that would culminate in 2020. A massive undertaking that saw the development of new degree programs, realignment of academic departments and schools, building and capital improvements on all campuses, and creative programmatic developments, the Bicentennial Strategic Plan marshalled the expertise of thousands of faculty and staff across the university. Consult the University Archives for final reports on these plans.

In 2009, discussions began with IU Foundation President and CEO Eugene Tempel and Vice President Marti Heil to coordinate the first-ever university-wide campaign to coincide with the IU Bicentennial timeline. Just prior to the For All campaign, the IU Foundation had developed a model of alternating Bloomington and Indianapolis campaigns, with regional campus campaigns occurring occasionally. Continuing this approach would have resulted in an IUPUI campaign in the 2020 calendar year and it was felt that a university-wide campaign would better reflect the identity of the university at its 200th anniversary. Under the direction of IU Foundation President and CEO Dan Smith, For All: The Bicentennial Campaign for Indiana University emerged between 2012 and 2020 and raised nearly $3.9 billion for university programs, capital projects, and endowment investment. Final reports on the For All campaign are available at the University Archives and at the IU Foundation.

Chapter 2: Planning and Purpose

Steering Committee Report

In the spring semester of 2016, President McRobbie appointed a 31-person steering committee, co-chaired by Professors Kathy Johnson and Steve Watt, comprised of students, faculty, and staff members, many of whom were also Indiana University alumni. The Steering Committee Report, available on the Bicentennial website and at the University Archives, issued in the summer of 2016, outlined an intellectual framework for the development of the Bicentennial program, defined program goals, outlined key principles, and suggested major programmatic elements. The report suggested:

The notion of a people's university serves as an effective organizing principle as well. Just as the writing of history has evolved to include more grass-roots voices "from the ground up," our activities should predominantly stem from individuals, departments, schools, and campuses rather than emanating exclusively from the top-down.

Among the most important guidance received by the Bicentennial Steering Committee were the following points:

- The program should balance the past, present, and future;
- New stories about IU history should be made widely available;
- The historic strengths of IU should be leveraged for programming decisions;
- Wherever possible, visitation to all IU campuses and telling IU's story to new audiences around the world should be encouraged;
- The program should be anchored by approximately 30 university-wide signature projects organized centrally which should be outweighed in number by unit, department, school, and campus projects;
- Grant programs and appropriate funding should be developed centrally to assist units with the costs of new projects, courses, and conferences;
- Success should be defined and measured by a variety of metrics;
- A cohesive marketing and communications brand should be developed for the IU Bicentennial, but it should not seek to compete with the existing brands for the university and the campaign, and;
- Student engagement should be a high priority within staffing and program planning.

Prevailing Goals and Mission

The Bicentennial Steering Committee report summarized three prevailing program goals:

Celebrate and recognize that great universities are distinguished by the contributions of individuals and institutions who are advocates, alumni, communities, donors, faculty, friends, staff, and students of Indiana University who have contributed to IU's first two centuries. Through existing and new efforts, we will acknowledge, honor, and express genuine gratitude for their commitment, loyalty, and leadership.

Chronicle, document, and explore IU's history, both the good and the bad, through databases and information systems, policy development, public discussion and outreach, scholarly and creative work and best practices related to discovering IU's cultural and historical identity. These efforts should identify Indiana University's past in relation to education, learning, research, social well-being, diversity, and community engagement for 200 years, its impact on the state, nation, and the world.

Inspire and engage students, faculty, staff, alumni, donors, community members, and peers in the events, publications, and other activities of the Bicentennial in ways that they find inspiring, meaningful, and relevant to their IU experience and present-day lives. These activities should be designed to strengthen, rejuvenate, and rediscover University traditions that connect past, present, and future generations to IU's heritage and values. They should build on IU's historic strengths and should seek to distinguish Indiana University from among many outstanding public research universities.

Building from these various recommendations of the Bicentennial Steering Committee, the IU Bicentennial staff defined the program mission as:

The Indiana University Bicentennial is a multi-year, multi-campus program that is academically driven, historically grounded, intellectually stimulating, and enjoyable. Through focused study and criticism, reflection, celebration, and documentation, the Bicentennial demonstrates how Indiana University has served as a "people's university." The Program includes a dynamic series of Bicentennial Signature Projects complemented by activities stemming from individuals, departments, schools, and campuses.

Timeline and Rationale

The Bicentennial Steering Committee report recommended a four-year program between 2016 and 2020. The main justification for this extended timeline was the inclusion of campus, department, program, and other anniversaries within the broad framework of the Bicentennial Anniversary Era. For example, in 2016 and 2017, IU South Bend celebrated a three-part anniversary: 100 years since the beginning of IU classes in South Bend, 50 years since the awarding of the first degrees in South Bend, and 25 years since the founding of the Raclin School of the Arts at IUSB. The campus Jubilee was the first of many high-profile anniversaries that overlapped with the IU Bicentennial, which most notably included the 50th Anniversary of IUPUI, the 75th Anniversary of IU Kokomo, the 100th Anniversary of the Kelley School of Business, and many others. Likewise, starting the program in 2016 allowed for the symbolic connection to the State of Indiana's Bicentennial commemoration in 2016.

A second rationale for the extended program timeline was distributing the sheer number of events, building dedications and groundbreakings, and other activities across a crowded annual university calendar. In addition, developing new courses, implementing large-scale grant-funded projects, and publishing dozens of new books and other materials required a multi-year timeline. A complete listing of all events and activities can be found in Appendix A.

Staffing and Volunteers

Consistent with the Bicentennial Steering Committee recommendations, the program was staffed by three full-time staff positions: 1. Project Manager 2016-2020; 2. Office Manager 2016-2020; 3. Communications and Marketing Manager 2017-2019/Assistant Project Manager 2018-2020) whose effort was complemented by three expert professionals and faculty members on loan from their home departments for the bicentennial period: University Historian 2016-2020; Bicentennial Archivist 2016-2020; and Bicentennial Events Coordinator 2017-2020. The Director of the Bicentennial program served concurrently as Deputy Chief of Staff in the Office of the President from 2015-2020.

More than 150 paid student interns and hourly employees across all IU campuses were critical program staff members between 2016 and 2020. And nearly 1,200 volunteers contributed to the successful execution of committee work, grant projects, events, publications, videos, and hundreds of activities. Three university-wide Bicentennial retreats were held in the summers of 2017, 2018, and 2019 to raise awareness of program and funding opportunities and to develop collaborative programs across units. More than 700 faculty, staff, and students participated in one or more of those retreats. For a listing of program-related staff and volunteers, see Appendix B, and Bicentennial program records at the University Archives.

Chapter 3: Communications and Marketing

To create its marketing and communications plan, Brittany Terwilliger, Bicentennial Communications and Marketing Manager, consulted with key marketing and communications leaders at IU (e.g. Rob Zinkan, Eleanor Berman, Tim Keller, Ryan Piurek, et al.) and conducted focus groups and market research. Based on these recommendations and findings, the IU Bicentennial communications and marketing plan focused on seven interconnected strategies:

- simple, coordinated marks and visual assets,
- a robust, interactive, and multi-functional website,
- student-led social media engagement,
- a select number of program publications in print and digital formats,
- a variety of promotional merchandise for program participants and audience members,
- endorsed vendor-developed merchandise, and
- an earned and paid media strategy.

Key to executing these various strategies was the professional staff at IU Studios and IU Communications. Regular updates from the IU Bicentennial through the professional communications teams at IU, IUB, IUPUI, each regional campus, all schools, and other programs allowed for highly consistent messaging to the broadest reach of IU audiences. For the final two years of the program, Kara Freeland served as Bicentennial projects manager at IU Studios.

Mark and Visual Assets

Image 1: Bicentennial Banners line Seventh Street in Bloomington, IN

In 2016, at the outset of the IU Bicentennial, IU featured two active marketing campaigns—the IU “Fulfilling the Promise” marketing campaign and the IU Foundation’s “For All: The Indiana University Bicentennial Campaign.” In addition, there were dozens of successful campus (e.g. IUPUI’s “What Matters. Where It Matters”), school (e.g. Kelley School’s “Moment to Momentum”), and other marketing campaigns underway around the university. To avoid overlap or confusion, the Office of the Bicentennial and IU Communications decided early on that the program would not carry an independent “tagline” but rather would be associated predominantly with a set of traditional wordmarks around the well-recognized IU trident.

These simple, coordinated marks appeared on all IU Bicentennial sponsored programs from 2016 through 2020. In addition, the university adopted an IU Bicentennial stationery and envelope system that was available for use by all units of the university from 2019 through 2020.

invitations, programs, signs, presentation slides, and many other pre-designed assets. In addition, the IU Studios Brand website included Bicentennial branded assets to increase usability and accessibility for any IU marketing or communications needs.

The Bicentennial Website

One of the biggest investments of program staff effort was in the development and maintenance of the 200.iu.edu website. The site launched in the fall of 2016 and was the main source of information about the Bicentennial program, and included a repository for new historical timelines and stories, applications for grants and internships, sponsorship request forms, volunteer signup sheets, and the master events calendar for the program. The website was managed day-to-day by Sarah Jacobi, Bicentennial Office Manager. For the period September 2016 to October 2020, the website had: 208,706 individual sessions from 148,346 individual users, 414,517 total page views, an average of 1.82 pages per session and 2:53 average session duration. The launch in January 2017 of the Bicentennial grants program saw the highest level of page views per session engagement to 4.41 (more than double industry standard); the opening of the celebratory year in fall 2019 saw a record high 19,217 website sessions and 13,708 users in the month of September 2019. Additional website metrics are in the office files at the University Archives. One of the most robust features of the website were the hundreds of historical essays, timelines, blog posts, story maps, podcasts, and other materials developed predominantly by Bicentennial student interns. These projects and content will be described more fully in Chapter 6 on the Bicentennial Internship program.

Social Media

Given the prominence and effectiveness of official IU-related social media (e.g., Indiana University, IU Bloomington, IUPUI, IU Athletics, etc.) that already had millions of followers between them, the Office of the Bicentennial decided to focus its social media postings through Facebook, Twitter, and Instagram that could then be amplified by these university partners to reach their audiences. Our social media accounts were managed day-to-day by excellent student interns—Tennie Worrell, Elizabeth Soto, and Rachel Gillam—under the supervision of Bicentennial staff members.

IU Studios developed a custom mark system to recognize multiple anniversaries—for example, a campus anniversary and the IU Bicentennial—and it was available to any IU unit who wished to use a multi-anniversary mark.

On the IU Bicentennial website, a linked “Toolkit” of all Bicentennial assets was developed for easy download. This digital toolkit included branded logos, marks, approved images, social media graphics, badges, and frames, and a variety of templates for e-invitations, print

Image 3: IU Kokomo multi-anniversary mark

The Office of the Bicentennial's main objectives through social media were to post program announcements, events, magazine stories or other publications, blog posts, content related to Bicentennial sponsored projects, archival photos and historical content, and other timely information as needed. We developed a regular series of posts related to Bicentennial Minutes videos, #MakingIUHistory student videos, #OnThisDay in IU history posts, #MedalMonday highlights, and #HiddenFigureFriday stories. Through October 2020, we generated 2,260 total posts across the three channels. While building an independent audience was not a top priority for the Bicentennial, each channel did develop its own small audience: Facebook (1,128 followers), Twitter (1,839 followers) and Instagram (1,645 followers). Most of these followers were university accounts who amplified the bicentennial messaging by reposting, liking, retweeting, etc. onto their own accounts to reach broader audiences. This practice makes capturing the true impact and reach of the Bicentennial's social media presence difficult to calculate. Counting only Bicentennial-owned accounts (not the broader university accounts which posted Bicentennial content), the Facebook account registered 28,824 engagements and 814,747 impressions; Twitter 103,702 engagements and 8,614,833 impressions, and Instagram 11,287 engagements and 196,145 impressions.

Among our most popular social media content were:

- 198th Birthday video, narrated by IUAA CEO J T. Forbes, which previewed the IU Bicentennial program (46,000 impressions on Facebook)
- Straight No Chaser's debut performance of the IU Bicentennial song at the Bicentennial Ceremony (11,000 impressions on Facebook)
- 200: The Bicentennial Magazine postings (Issue 2 had 45,000 impressions alone on Facebook)
- IU History video debuted at Bicentennial Ceremony (15,000 impressions on Facebook)
- Viola Davis receiving an honorary doctorate at A Day of Commemoration in honor of MLK Day and IU's 200 Anniversary (1,000 impressions on Instagram)
- 200 Festival photo exhibit (1,600 impressions on Instagram)
- Big Red Bus Bicentennial Traveling Exhibit debut (1,700 impressions on Instagram)
- Inaugural ringing of the Bicentennial Metz Carillon (1,000 impressions on Instagram and 82,000 impressions on Twitter)
- Fashion Design student exhibition (1,000 impressions on Instagram and 46,000 impressions on Twitter)
- May 2020 Commencement commemorative poster unveiling (24,000 impressions on Twitter)
- George Taliaferro Sport Association founder Carrington Smith's #MakingIUHistory video (17,000 impressions on Facebook and 29,000 impressions on Twitter)

Print and Digital Publications

A small number of print publications were deployed during the Bicentennial including a program brochure in 2017 for awareness raising and internal faculty and staff mailings. We printed only a handful of fundraising and sponsorship materials for use with the Bridging the Visibility Gap project, All for You: A Traveling Exhibit, and the Museum of IU. Signature project-related print materials included postcards for recruiting oral history participants, event-related programs, and outreach materials for community partners advertising the Bicentennial on Tour.

BRIDGING VISIBILITY GAP

MARTHA DAWSON (1924-2015) spent her career and life brightening corners and breaking through barriers. She was a pioneering researcher in the fields of elementary and multicultural education and a distinguished university professor and administrator. She earned her BS from Virginia State College in 1943, her MS from Indiana University in 1954, and her EdD from Indiana University in 1956 at a time when significant barriers existed for women, and especially African American women. Dr. Dawson went on to join the faculty of the Hampton Institute before returning to Indiana University in 1970 to research the field of multicultural education by establishing a training program for teachers to work with diverse ethnic and socio-economic groups—theories and models that propelled her to the cutting edge of the multiculturalism movements in public education. Upon returning to Indiana and in recognition of her research stature, she became the first African American woman to receive tenure at Indiana University Bloomington.

The most significant publication developed by the IU Bicentennial was 200: The Bicentennial Magazine. Under the editorship of Brittany Terwilliger (Issues 1-3) and Sarah Jacobi (Issues 4-5), the magazine provided an outlet for untold or lesser known stories about IU history written in an accessible manner. The magazine was artfully designed by Kaye Lee Johnston (Issues 1-3) and Jennifer L. Witzke (Issues 4-5). The publication was developed as a six-issue periodical with the first five issues highlighting a breadth of stories from all IU campuses and across all themes. Issue 6 was intended to be a themed-issue focused on the history of philanthropy at IU and was meant to be published in conjunction with the closing of the For All: The Bicentennial Campaign for Indiana University. Due to pandemic-related scheduling constraints and limited access to archives and materials, and in light of other pressing historical debates which emerged on campus in the summer of 2020 that demanded the attention of the University Historian and other magazine contributors, the history of philanthropy issue was postponed indefinitely.

The first five issues of the magazine featured 47 articles, from 39 contributing authors, including several student authors. Themes explored included: philanthropy, history, mascots, campus history and development, inventions/innovations, race history, IU and the Civil War, public service, student activism, oral history, creation of the extension division, historical markers, medicine, art, nature, academic freedom, alumni created businesses, athletics, civil rights laws, culture centers, bridging the visibility gap, nature, and academic research. The magazine was distributed in print to 250,000 individuals and digitally to more than 1.6 million individuals. Among the dozens of unsolicited letters and emails from magazine readers were positive comments about individual stories and expressions of joy at diving into the historical material. After the early issues were published, we also received constructive suggestions for future content. Some content was repurposed for pride.iu.edu, expanding the reach of Bicentennial research and writing.

Promotional Merchandise

The IU Bicentennial marketing effort included heavy reliance on audience-relevant branded giveaway items between 2016 and 2020. For students, products like water bottles, ear buds, and highlighters were introduced to raise awareness and participation of student audience members. For faculty and staff members on all IU campuses, cell phone ID wallets were used by Campus Card Services to increase use of the Crimson Card and to spread the word about the IU Bicentennial; and Human Resources used branded USB drives to distribute HR handbooks and hiring information digitally. For alumni and donors and for some specific events, wine glasses, coasters, and leather journals were used for promotion and to raise awareness. For oral history participants, coffee mugs were used as recruitment and participation items. And a variety of low-cost items, like lapel pins, pens, pencils, note pads, and t-shirts were deployed to reach the largest number of people. Functional items for events and conferences including branded grocery bags, folders, lanyards, tablecloths, etc. One very creative and cost-effective promotional item was branded chocolate bars; these were used in lieu of more costly dessert options at formal and informal events. And, due to popular demand, a replica of the Bicentennial Medal was developed as a commemorative Bicentennial coin and was distributed at major Bicentennial events during the celebratory year. Nine vendors were utilized in total; 8 of the 9 vendors are Indiana-based companies and 4 of the 9 are women/minority-owned businesses. A summary of nearly 250,000 promotional merchandise items is available at the University Archives.

Vendor Merchandise

The IU Office of Sponsorships, Licensing, and Trademarks approved several special uses of archival images affiliated with Indiana University for usage in bicentennial-related merchandise. Products including apparel, glassware, and other novelty items were available for purchase through vendors and local retailers. An IU-alumni owned business in Indianapolis also developed a bicentennial-themed Escape Room which drew visitors and alumni to downtown Indianapolis. The IU Dining and IU Catering offices on the Bloomington campus also developed bicentennial-inspired items including coffee for use and sale in their locations.

One program—the IU Bicentennial wine collection—was a special initiative of the IU Alumni Association in honor of the Bicentennial. With support from the IU Office of General Counsel and Office of the Vice President and CFO, an exception to the university’s licensing rules regarding alcohol was made for the unique purpose of launching an IU Bicentennial alumni wine program. Modeled after other university alumni association wine programs including the very successful program at the University of Notre Dame, the IUAA, under the coordination of Stefan Davis and Amy Joyner and their colleagues, engaged exclusively with VinoShipper and alumni-owned wineries to launch the program in 2018. Unique and beautiful bottle labels were selected by a committee of IU Alumni Association staff members and a tasting panel selected by the IU Alumni Association chose the varietals. In its first year (2018-2019) the available inventory sold out after only a few months. The first two years of sales generated more than $15,000 toward the IUAA General Scholarship Fund (FY19 and FY20). Year two (2019-2020) was unfortunately disrupted by both the global pandemic and earlier in the year, by wildfires that threatened the California supply chain of our alumni vendors.

Earned and Paid Media

The very large majority of media mentions for the IU Bicentennial were earned media in local and statewide publications and through social media. A list of published media mentions is available on the 200.iu.edu website and at the University Archives.

Coordinated by IU Studios staff members Sue Doron and Luke Chase, a small media buying campaign focused on awareness and event-based media was planned for 2019 through 2020. Paid media included a presence at the Indianapolis International Airport, billboards along Indiana highways, and placed print or digital advertising in the Indiana University Alumni Magazine, The Herald-Times, Bloom Magazine, Indianapolis Business Journal, Inside INdiana Business, and Star Media and Gannett.

Chapter 4: Signature Projects

Lectures, Reunions, and Symposia

Bicentennial Alumni Reunion

The Bicentennial Alumni Reunion (BAR) was canceled due to COVID-19. The event was scheduled to be held at IUPUI June 1-3, 2020 and IU Bloomington June 4-6, 2020, concluding with the Bicentennial Celebration on the evening of June 6, 2020. The signature alumni event for the Bicentennial program, the week-long reunion and celebration included plans for lectures, concerts, film screenings, and panel discussions with campus, alumni, and community leaders. At Indianapolis, plans included a series of community-focused plenary sessions, behind-the-scenes tours of new and unique spaces on campus, and the re-opening of the Madam Walker Theatre highlighted by a special performance. At Bloomington, plans included outdoor film screenings, discussion panels with coaches, alumni guest appearances, special access to the new Pfau Golf Course, and a campus progressive dinner event showcasing new and special campus spaces in a unique way culminating at the newly renovated Eskenazi Museum of Art.

The program included meetings of the IU Board of Trustees and the IU Foundation Board, the Women's Philanthropy Leadership Council Business Meetings, the Women's Philanthropy Leadership Council's 10th Anniversary Celebration, the IU Alumni Association Annual Cream and Crimson Leadership Weekend, the IU Foundation's Partners in Philanthropy

Annual Dinner, the IU Athletics Varsity Club Board Meetings, the Kelley School of Business Centennial Celebration, and the Wells Scholars Program Reunion. Both campus locations were meant to host meetings of campus, school, and program advisory boards including: regional campus chancellor's advisory boards, Eskenazi Museum Board of Advisors, McKinney School of Law joint meeting of the Board of Visitors and Alumni Board, School of Social Work Alumni Board, School of Public Health Bloomington Deans Alliance Board, Luddy School of Informatics, Computing, and Engineering Dean's Advisory Council Meeting, Kelley School of Business (Bloomington and Indianapolis) joint meeting of the Global Dean's Council and Alumni Board, College of Arts and Sciences Executive Dean's Advisory Board, Maurer School of Law Alumni Board Meeting, School of Optometry Dean's Development Council Meeting. One highlight of the program was the planned convening of the first-ever International Alumni Leadership Summit—a gathering of alumni volunteers from alumni communities around the world.

The final evening of the Bicentennial Alumni Reunion was dedicated to the Bicentennial Celebration—a major outdoor event near Showalter Fountain on the Bloomington campus. This event was expected to draw 2,500 people and signaled the end of the Bicentennial celebratory year and the triumphant conclusion of For All: The Indiana University Bicentennial Campaign, which at its conclusion raised nearly $3.9 billion including 5,807 new scholarships and 235 new endowed chairs and professorships from 322,548 donors from all 50 states and more than 100 countries.

Bicentennial Lecture Series

The opportunity to learn from distinguished visiting lecturers was the main objective of the Bicentennial Lecture Series. In partnership with 13 existing visiting lecture programs around the university, 10 Bicentennial lectures were hosted on 5 separate campuses between 2018 and 2020 attracting nearly 6,000 audience members. The roster of invited guests was informed by a committee of 7 senior and distinguished faculty and staff members chaired by Professor Carolyn Calloway-Thomas. The committee recommended that the lecture series highlight : Arts and Literature, Business, Geopolitics, Civility and Tolerance, Science and Technology, and Sustainability.

International Education at the Crossroads Symposium

Held October 25-27, 2018, this global symposium marked the 60th anniversary of the National Defense Education Act and the legacy of its Title VI programs promoting foreign language education. This event brought together experts in language, area, and global and international studies with policy makers and other stakeholders to assess Title VI's lasting impact, while looking towards the future needs and priorities of international education in a changing and increasingly interconnected world.

The Future of Higher Education Symposia

In coordination with the IU Institute for Advanced Study, the Office of the Bicentennial encouraged the facilitation of symposia that focus on the future of higher education and Indiana University. This forward-looking endeavor will help IU consider difficult questions as it enters its third century.

The first symposium: Provocations: Conversations toward a Bold University, took place on September 27, 2019 as part of the 200 Festival. Topics covered during this event included:

- How can we best serve 21st century American pluralism?
- What do real access and equity look like and what do we do to achieve them?
- What sustainable and cost-effective models will most successfully allow us to achieve new goals?
- How do we build a university community that is vibrant, welcoming, and fair and fosters meaningful connections with the communities that surround us?

In total, 52 people participated in this event.

Additional symposia were scheduled to occur during the Spring 2020 semester. These events were canceled due to COVID-19. Many of these symposia reconfigured their events and hosted virtual sessions during the Fall 2020 semester.

Originally scheduled for April 2020 at the Indiana Convention Center in Indianapolis and postponed due to COVID-19, the symposium will be held as an online event April 9-10, 2021.

The symposium offers a virtual platform to share and promote cross-disciplinary research, discussion, and collaboration. Academic organizations, with members throughout Indiana from numerous universities and related institutions, will host education sessions, poster sessions, cross-disciplinary panels, and keynote speakers.

Chaired by IU Northwest Professor Surekha Rao, the program committee is comprised of 12 individuals representing organizational program partners who hail from Anderson University, Hanover College, Indiana Academy of Science, Indiana State Library, Indiana State University, Indiana University Bloomington, Indiana University Northwest, IUPUI, Jump in Health, Marian University, Purdue University, and the University of Indianapolis.

Public Art and Campus Beautification

IU Public Art Strategic Plan

Public art, defined as outdoor sculpture for purposes of this project, has long been a major asset in the university's art collection and in beautifying IU campuses across the state. This Bicentennial project focused on five objectives: establishing a community of art experts among faculty and staff on all campuses; developing an inventory of existing public art (owned or leased) on all IU campuses; identifying short-term and long-term public art restoration and maintenance priorities; recommending a new streamlined structure for public art considerations and approvals in the form of a new public art policy, and; acquiring or commissioning a commemorative Bicentennial public art piece. When taken together, these objectives were intended to make significant headway toward defining a public art strategic plan for Indiana University.

Image 18: IU Kokomo's iconic sculpture, The Phoenix, received needed maintenance as part of the Bicentennial's public art efforts

Led by committee chairperson, David Brenneman, Wilma E. Kelley Director of the Eskenazi Museum of Art, with the leadership and assistance of Presidential Intern MaryClaire Pappas, the project committee included 28 faculty, staff, and students from seven IU campuses and central administration departments. In two retreat-style full-day gatherings held in 2016 and 2017, campus committee members presented brief histories and summaries of their campus public art and local principles and procedures for installations. Several key conclusions were articulated from these first-ever cross-campus public art meetings: there is no cohesive design aesthetic to IU's "collection" of public art; for some campuses, there is little to no consultation with campus artists/art experts in the selection and placement of public art; there is no comprehensive plan of locations where public art could/should be installed; there are varying uses of leased, temporary, donated, and permanent public art objects as well as art from faculty, staff, alumni, community members, etc.; there is an opportunity and obligation to educate donors and development officers who are in a position to receive public art about IU's plans and principles; and there is a need to develop a strategy to maintain and restore existing pieces in concert with planning for future acquisitions or installations.

By March 2018, committee members Sherry Rouse, Katie Chattin, and Amy Patterson developed a master inventory of all public art (available in the University Archives) and condition reports on the pieces most in need of immediate repair or maintenance, which included various bronze pieces, the Indiana Arc in Bloomington, and the Phoenix at IU Kokomo. President Michael McRobbie, on the recommendation of Director Brenneman, identified William Lowe Bryan estate funding for immediate and ongoing use toward public art restoration. With those funds in hand, restoration and maintenance of many public art pieces were completed by 2019. An annual allocation from the Bryan estate remains under the direction of Director Brenneman for ongoing public art restoration.

Based on the committee's discussions about streamlining procedures and approvals for public art selection and installation, a new Public Art Policy was discussed. The proposed policy includes the establishment of an expert public art committee comprised of the Eskenazi Museum Director and the deans of the Eskenazi School of Art, Architecture + Design and the Herron School of Art and Design. This small committee would have responsibility and authority to review public art proposals and make recommendations to the university president. A draft of the first articulation of an IU Public Art Strategic Plan is available at the University Archives. After financial study and analysis, the acquisition/commissioning of a commemorative Bicentennial public art sculpture was not pursued.

Campus Beautification and Heritage Project

Image 19: The Conrad Prebys Amphitheater was completed in October 2016, providing an outside venue for arts performances

One of the hallmarks of Indiana University is the beauty of its campuses. The Campus Beautification and Heritage Project was defined by a collection of individual structural and artistic projects completed since 2007 that focused on beautifying IU's campuses and preserving campus heritage sites. Coordinated by the Office of the Bicentennial, with the Office of the President and Office of the Vice President for Capital Planning and Facilities, and led by Mia Williams, university landscape architect and Adam Thies, associate vice president for capital planning, the project completed nearly 40 projects on 5 campuses. We are indebted to the Well House Society, whose generous support made many of these projects possible. A summary of projects with images can be found on the Bicentennial website.

Heritage and Legacy Programs

Bicentennial Archives Development and Deployment

The Archives Development and Deployment Project (ADDP) supported evaluation and assessment of archival practices, research needs, and holdings across all of the Indiana University campuses with the goals of making archival materials more accessible through digitization, centralized online repositories, exhibitions, and other resources needed to support day-to-day archival operations.

ADDP Team (Council of University Archivists)

The Archives Development and Deployment Project team was comprised of one campus archivist from each campus and was coordinated by Bicentennial Archivist Kristin Leaman. The team met bi-annually to set goals for the project and to consult with Libraries IT professionals and the University Archives' Records Manager. The project team determined that these cross-campus discussions to share best practices and updates were valuable and they have now been institutionalized as a Council of University Archivists who intend to continue working together after the Bicentennial.

ADDP Campus Assessment Reports

Subcommittees of the ADDP committee visited each campus archive and conducted site and collection assessments to better understand collection mission, scope, purpose, collection policy availability, facilities and storage, exhibition space, digitization and cataloguing activity, physical collection size, public services, budget, and personnel. The assessment report summary is available at the University Archives. From these assessments, ADDP project goals focused on: equipment needs and student staffing to support digitization efforts, a coordinated student newspaper digitization project, an online digital manuscript/collection repository (Next Generation Archives Online), and other activities that supported the overall program goals.

Equipment and Student Staffing Support Provided to Campus Archives

The Office of the Bicentennial provided high quality scanners (12000XL-Photo) and computer workstations to each campus to facilitate the objective of digitizing photographs and manuscripts for public and educational use. In addition, the office funded student hourly employees to assist with digitization efforts. Several thousand pages and photographs were scanned during this project including, for example, at IU East where they digitized 2,806 images, 829 photographs, 1,040 campus bulletins, and 843 pages of student journals; and at IU Kokomo where they digitized 14,873 items including 3,437 photographs, 4,111 slides, 1,303 negatives, and 6,022 paper records.

Student Newspaper Digitization

Student newspapers have been part of the student activities on IU campuses since the Indiana Daily Student was founded at IU Bloomington in 1867. One major initiative of the ADDP project was the Newspaper Digitization Project, which digitized newspapers from IU East, IUPUI, IU Kokomo, IU Northwest and IU South Bend, which consist of over 30 student-run newspaper titles ranging in coverage from 1930 to 2019. These five campuses joined IU Southeast's already digitized student newspapers to provide over 40,000 pages that reveal campus life, local events, and broader current events through the perspectives of Indiana University students. IU Bloomington's Indiana Daily Student was too large of a project to include in this first phase. Now that the papers from IUPUI and the regional campuses are complete and a model workflow has been developed, we hope that the IDS will be next in line for student newspaper digitization.

Total number of pages digitized: 42,800

Number of pages digitized by campus: IU East (2,998); IU Kokomo (4,379); IU Northwest (8,385); IUPUI (16,890); IU South Bend (10,148). These newspapers will reside on a new images repository service that is being built by IUB and IUPUI Libraries called Digital Collections. By March 2021, we anticipate that all digitized newspapers for all of these campuses will be available on this new website. This student newspaper archive preserves and makes accessible valuable historical information about campus activities and student life.

Next Generation Archives Online

Indiana University is home to over 200 individual museums, archives, and major collections, some comprising millions of pages of manuscripts, institutional records, and others containing rare and special objects. Up until now, the limited display of those collections in digital formats online has been achieved through dozens of different, localized approaches. The Next Generation Archives Online (NGAO) developed and implemented best practices, workflows, services, and software to facilitate the management, description, digitization, digital preservation, and discovery of manuscript collections for all IU campuses. The resulting website: archives.iu.edu launched in 2020 and will continue to grow as additional collections are integrated into the project.

Total number of manuscript collections in NGAO: 2,896.

Number of collections by campus: IUB (2,866); IU Kokomo (2); IU Northwest (3); IU South Bend (13); IU Southeast (1); IUPUI (2); IU East (9). Next Generation Archives Online is an effort to make it easier for archivists from across IU to create and maintain finding aids describing their collections and to make these finding aids, along with digitized items, available on the web for discovery. There are three main open-source technologies involved: ArchivesSpace, an archival collections management system used by archivists and staff. The production instance of ArchivesSpace launched on June 10, 2020; Arclight, an archival collections discovery system that powers archives.iu.edu. The public Arclight-based site (archives.iu.edu) was soft-launched publicly on August 6, 2020; and Spotlight, an open-source tool (still to be implemented as part of NGAO) for building online exhibits.

Other Project Activities

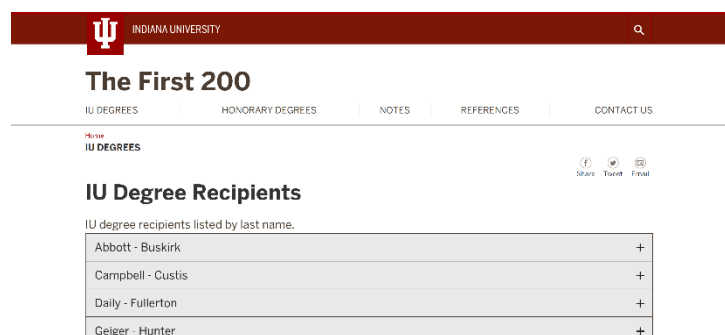

Image 21: Screenshot of The First 200 website

The IU Libraries purchased a university-wide subscription to archive-it.org, a valuable website archiving tool. This was a recommendation that came from the ADDP campus assessment report. The ADDP committee also worked with the University Records Management Working Group (URMWG) and University Records Manager Molly Wittenberg, to create a university records management policy and retention management system for archivists and university departments to use for reference. The records management and retention policy is available on the university policy website. Several special opportunities for adding to the IU Bloomington archival collection emerged during the Bicentennial as well. Staff member Jane Suhr in the Office of Human Resources located a collection of old employee cards that had been digitized and uploaded into a local database which is now available to university archivists for reference. Doug Bauder, from the IUB LGBTQ+ Student Support Center donated decades of scrapbooks of center activities which were digitized and made available online.

Ethan Bernhardt and Lisa Scully, from the IUB Office of the Registrar, with assistance from Nicole Todd in the Office of the President, established a “First 200” series online starting with the first 200 graduates of IU, with degree and biographical information wherever it could be located. There are countless other examples of new additions to the university archival collections and new uses of these collections, spearheaded by the ADDP project.

Bicentennial Oral History Project

The Indiana University Bicentennial Oral History Project began in 2008 with volunteers from the Office of the President and Indiana University Archives predominantly interviewing alumni from IU Bloomington at alumni events. From 2016-2018, Kristin Leaman, Bicentennial Archivist, and Barbara Truesdell, Assistant Director, Center for Documentary Research and Practice, served as co-directors. Leaman continued as the project director from 2018-2020. Karen Mackenzie Keffer and then Rafal Swiatkowski served as the Oral History Coordinator and expertly organized the gargantuan task of collecting and transcribing thousands of hours of interviews. Molly Miner also provided significant leadership to this program as the student coordinator and dozens of hourly staff members from 2016 through 2020 contributed to the painstaking work of transcription, editing, and quality control. To date, the project has captured more than 1,500 interviews. In 2016, the project evolved in its scope and expanded to interviewing alumni, faculty, and staff at all Indiana University campuses and brought the IU Bloomington Emeriti interview project, led by Professors Don Gray, Richard Stryker, Bonnie Brownlee and Bruce Jaffee, into the Bicentennial project.

Image 22: Bicentennial staff used postcards to recruit project volunteers and interviewees

The IU Libraries Technologies staff member Jon Cameron and Jon Dunn worked with Aviary to design a new and revolutionary oral history online platform to host transcripts and audio files in a searchable online database. The website oralhistory.iu.edu officially launched during the 200 Festival on September 26, 2019. As of November 2020, there have been 2,770 website visits from 32 countries and there are 988 (of the 1,503) interviews completed and online. In total, 1,354 interviews (of the 1,503) have been transcribed and are in the final stages of editing and quality control before being added to the website. Eight oral history-based videos were produced for new student orientation on each campus and students wrote four blog posts about their work with the oral history project. The project staff members also delivered 29 public and academic talks about the project, process, and innovative technologies.

The mission of this project was to record, preserve, and make available to future generations the memories and experiences of IU alumni, faculty, and staff from all IU campuses. Capturing an institutional account of IU that is not written solely from the perspective of administrators, with a focus on documenting underrepresented voices, helps to provide a fuller understanding of the broader history of Indiana University. The gathering of these records was an important step toward a central Bicentennial objective of telling new stories about IU from diverse perspectives.

Since 2008, more than 100 individual volunteers have served as interviewers, conducting interviews in person and over the phone. Due to COVID-19, a special focused outreach effort to the Class of 2020 was undertaken to document the experiences of graduating students. These interviews were conducted entirely over the phone with the able and flexible assistance of the staff members in the Office of the Campus Operator.

The Bicentennial Oral History project employed 26 student employees between 2016 and 2020. These students worked a combined total of over 10,000 hours in support of this project. Its success is in large part due to their diligence and commitment.

Bridging the Visibility Gap

Image 23: IU dedicated a statue and outdoor space for Elinor Ostrom in November 2020

Objectives to diversify the historical narratives about Indiana University and to diversify the physical recognitions around IU campuses led to the adoption of the Bridging the Visibility Gap (BVG) project. The history of Indiana University is full of compelling stories of influence by women, people of color, and other individuals whose impact has not been truly appreciated by contemporary students, faculty, staff, alumni, and campus visitors. From 2015 to 2020, the Bridging the Visibility Project worked to bring those stories to light.

In 2016, Mary Brown Craig Intern Claire Repsholdt kicked off this project by gathering from members of the IU community more than 1,600 names of women affiliated with Indiana University whose stories were unknown, underappreciated, and/or whose distinction warranted further recognition. Under the direction of Assistant Project Manager Angel Nathan, interns Cassie Heeke, Alexandra Schrader-Dobris, Kira Zahedi, Jenna Fattah, Samantha Riley, and Arielle Pare contributed to this project through their archival research, project advocacy, and writing between 2017 and 2019. Graduate Assistant Ellie Kaverman contributed to the completion of several recognition projects, presented more than 20 talks about the project to students, faculty, staff, alumni, and donors across the country and around the state of Indiana, and added new compelling research on the history of women to the project list.

As of December 1, 2020, the BVG project interns spent more than 5,250 hours researching, writing, and sharing stories about IU hidden figures in 67 blogs, 7 timelines, and numerous articles in journals and magazines. The project generated more than 20 one-minute videos on hidden figures and events of IU's history, helping to diversify the university narrative. BVG completed 8 portraits, 8 historical markers, and secured the first statue of a woman on the Bloomington campus, in honor of Elinor Ostrom. The project was supported by the Well House Society and by the Visibility Fund, endowed by the Women's Philanthropy Leadership Council, for the specific purpose to expand the objectives of the project in perpetuity.

Data Visualization

Over its 200-year history, Indiana University has awarded over 900,000 degrees. Using data gathered from the IU Alumni Association and Office of the Registrar, the IU Network Science Institute created visualizations to demonstrate where alumni have come from, which campuses they attended, and their final or most recent locations.

The IU Bloomington Office of the Registrar compiled all of the raw data of degree information from 1830-2020 into a single data file. To do this, it explored eight sources of data:

- Student Information System (SIS): Covered most students who attended IU from 1965 to present.
- Alumni Data: IU Alumni Association provided information about graduates since the 1940s.
- Historical Transcripts: Scanned paper transcripts from the mid-1880s through the mid-1960s.

This may very well be the first complete listing of all degree recipients for a major university, especially one with a history as long and rich as Indiana University.

IU Historical Marker Program

To help commemorate its 200th anniversary, Indiana University developed a new, university-wide, historical marker program. IU historical markers are designed to commemorate people, organizations, places, and events that have had an extraordinary impact on the university, state, nation, or the world. The markers provide a physical reminder of the university's history and are intended to convey an accurate representation of its history, both the good and the bad. The markers consist of limestone boulders with bronze plaques affixed that explain the significance of the subject being honored. Every Indiana University campus installed at least one IU historical marker during the Bicentennial era. This program is intended to be a legacy project that continues past the conclusion of IU's Bicentennial celebrations so the university can continue to identify and commemorate important elements of its history in a public manner.

To establish this program, the IU Office of the Bicentennial established a new university policy, UA-11. The University Historian, supported by the Office of the Bicentennial, and Office of the President handled administrative duties for the program. Markers were approved when a topic was reviewed and recommended by the University Historian, Historical Marker Committee, campus chancellor/provost, and the university president.

Museum of IU

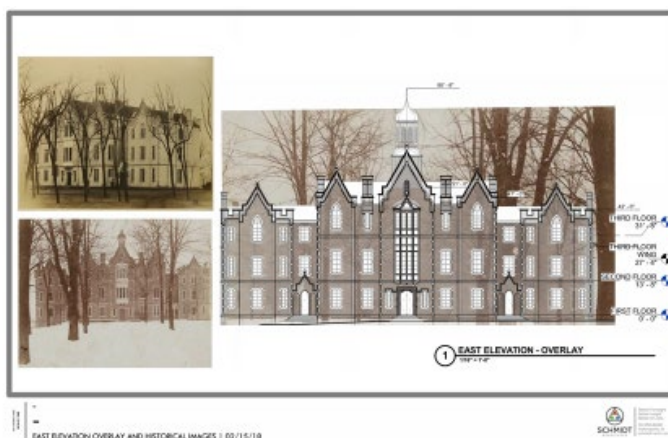

Image 27: Design ideas for the IU Museum were inspired by the First University Building which was located on IU's original campus south of the Monroe County Courthouse

Drawing its design inspiration from the First University Building, constructed in 1855, located at the Seminary Square campus in Bloomington, the proposed Museum of IU would become a showcase for the history of the university and an exhibition home for the hundreds of collections housed at IU.

Envisioned as a 3.5 floor exhibition and collections education center, the Museum would include semi-permanent university history exhibits in partnership with, for example, the University Archives, Wylie House, Campus Archives, IU Athletics, Moving Image Archive, IU Dentistry Historical Research Collection, IU School of Medicine Historical Instruments Collection, and community partners; and rotating exhibits in partnership with the Lilly Library, Eskenazi Museum of Art, Campus Art Collections, Mathers Museum, Glenn Black Laboratory, Sage Costume Collection, Kinsey Collection, Paleontology Collection, Historical Physics Equipment Collection, IUS Center for Cultural Resources, Archives of Traditional Music, Archives of African American Music and Culture, Black Film Center/Archive, and many others. Additional space for classes, receptions, research, welcoming/visitor materials, museum shop, and other functions were envisioned.

In addition to the Bicentennial project concept paper and supplementary architectural and fundraising materials, the Board of Aeon produced a report on proposed design features, potential educational uses, mission and principles for a Museum of IU; all of these materials can be reviewed at the University Archives. Adequate funding for the project could not be secured at this time so the project was postponed indefinitely. However, the combined Museum of Archaeology and Anthropology and the renovated McCalla Building into a Collections, Teaching, Research, and Exhibition Center both drew from the principles and overarching objectives of the Museum of IU project.

Public Programs and Outreach

Bicentennial Alumni Community Events

The celebration of Indiana University's 200th anniversary was not confined to its physical campuses. Alumni across the country gathered in January 2020 to mark this momentous occasion. In partnership with the Indiana University Alumni Association, the Office of the Bicentennial encouraged alumni communities to host local festivities to celebrate IU. Alumni communities celebrated the occasion by either hosting in-person gatherings or by encouraging their members to post remembrances and images on social media. In total, 25 alumni communities participated in this program along with 2,046 IUAA members. For details about alumni community programs, please see the University Archives.

Bicentennial Professors

Image 29: Bicentennial Professor Charlotte Westerhaus-Renfrow presenting to the Beech Grove Chamber of Commerce

Since the late 1800s, Indiana University faculty members have traveled around the state of Indiana offering lectures to members of the public. In honor of the university's 200th anniversary, this tradition was rejuvenated in the form of the Bicentennial Professors, chosen by the campus chancellors and provost to represent Indiana University. In the 2019-2020 academic year, 24 faculty members representing each of IU's campuses plus the IU School of Medicine, planned to visit each of Indiana's 92 counties to offer lectures on topics including: Business and Management, Community Development, Education, Health and Wellness, Climate Change and Sustainability, Diversity and Inclusion, Globalization, and Literature and Arts. A complete list of the Bicentennial Professors is located in Appendix B.

Most often hosted by Rotary Clubs, Chambers of Commerce, public libraries, and other civic organizations, 17 lectures were completed and an additional 27 were planned or under discussion when they were canceled due to COVID-19. Cindy Broderick, Coordinator of University Honors and Awards, oversaw the project's logistics. Bicentennial Professors visited approximately 1,000 people across the following Indiana counties: Marion, St. Joseph, Porter, White, Hamilton, Lake, Madison, Whitley, Knox, Tippecanoe, and Wayne. Canceled lectures were to be held in Franklin/Ripley County, Dubois, Monroe, Kosciusko, Sullivan, Scott, Bartholomew, Hancock, and Marshall. And, representatives from Jay County Chamber of Commerce, Jefferson County Public Library, Jennings County Public Library, Fulton County Chamber of Commerce, Seymour Chamber of Commerce (Jackson County), Harrison County Public Library, Scott County Public Library, Bremen Public Library (Marshall County), Jasper County Library (Jasper County), and the Westfield Chamber of Commerce (Hamilton County) had each been in various stages of planning visits at the onset of the COVID-19 pandemic.

Bicentennial Speakers Bureau

To accommodate the increased interest in Indiana University's history that was generated by the Bicentennial, the Office of the Bicentennial established the Bicentennial Speakers Bureau. The Bureau featured a roster of 16 speakers who provided presentations to interested groups about IU history. Members of the Bicentennial Speakers Bureau are listed in Appendix B.

Though many visits were held, COVID-19 did cause several engagements to be canceled. In total, the Speakers Bureau facilitated more than 150 talks to at least 6,449 people. For a full list of presentations, please see the master events list in Appendix A.

Publication and Media Series

Publications

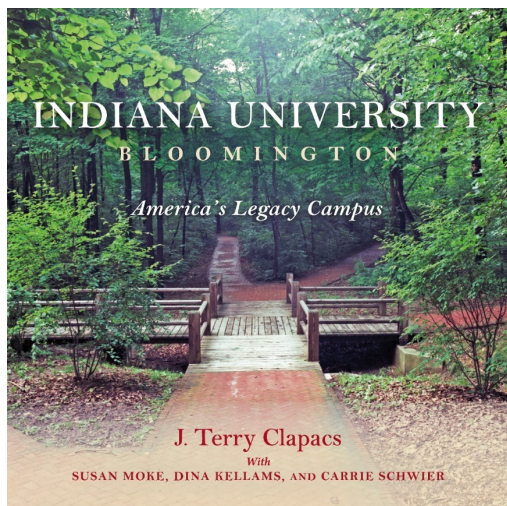

Image 30: Cover of J. Terry Clapacs' book, Indiana University Bloomington: America's Legacy Campus

IU anniversaries of the past have as a common theme, the publication of historical content about the university's development. Although it was determined early in program planning that a new "house history" about Indiana University was not desired, it was clear that there was an untapped interest in scholarly and more accessible content about IU history. Under the direction of Gary Dunham, Director of IU Press and Digital Publishing, the Publications project of the IU Bicentennial materialized as Well House Books, a newly founded series of the IU Press focused on people, places, and events affiliated with Indiana University. To date, Well House Books has published 13 titles, summarized below. Three additional books are due to be distributed during the 2020-2021 academic year. And more than a dozen additional titles are in development or advanced stages of publication. The series has been wildly successful—proving there is a captive audience of IU history aficionados, from the casual reader to the expert scholar. Between July 2017 and September 2020, 11,467 books have been purchased through the series. And despite the digital age of readership in which we now live, more than 11,000 of these purchases have been hardcover or paperback copies. As a philanthropic act to thank the supporters of the series and the broader IU alumni community, during the COVID-19 pandemic, the IU Press made 8 titles freely available in digital form online. Well House Books was supported in part by the Endowment for Excellence.

Media

The Office of the Bicentennial's media efforts were organized under three series, the Making IU History Series, Program Videos and the Bicentennial Minute Series. These videos highlighted lesser known aspects of IU's history, explored current student motivations toward making an impact during their time at IU, and provided compelling videos for events. In addition to the views during events and on other IU accounts, these videos generated 134,160 views on the IU Bicentennial YouTube and social media accounts as of November 9, 2020 according to Sprout Social Media Management Solutions. Jay Kincaid, director of facilities and technology for the IU Media School, collaborated with many campus and local community producers to help conceptualize the media series.

Making IU History

This video series focused on students enrolled at IU Bloomington between 2018-2020. The series asked students a challenging question: how are YOU personally making IU history? These student stories capture the spirit of community engagement and campus pride from current students whose academic and extracurricular endeavors will leave a mark on the history of the campus. The series was filmed, directed, and produced by a student film team who filmed their peers. In total, the student film team produced 44 videos for this series which generated 40,970 views on YouTube and social media as of November 9, 2020. For a list of the videos, please see the IU Bicentennial YouTube channel.

Program Videos

The Office of the Bicentennial created and promoted 38 program videos that supplemented specific events or projects. These videos enhanced the audience experience at events and raised awareness of Bicentennial projects. In addition to the views by people in attendance at events, the videos received 87,634 views on YouTube and social media as of November 9, 2020. Top videos included "Hail! To Old IU!" carillon performance video (28,713), "200 Years of Indiana University" short history video (8,981), and “Stardust Road” behind the scenes musical performance (3,212). For a listing of these videos, please see the IU Bicentennial YouTube channel and website.

Bicentennial Minutes Series

The Bicentennial Minute Series focused on unknown or untold stories in Indiana University’s history. Videos in this series were researched by staff members in the Office of the Bicentennial, University Historian, campus historians, and campus archivists. Blue Ace Media produced 70 videos which generated 5,556 views on YouTube and social media as of November 9, 2020. Top videos in this series included “Ted Kluszewski” (762 views), “Founding of the IMU” (657 views), and “Indiana University Auditorium Organ” (496). For a listing of all Bicentennial Minute Series, see the Bicentennial website and YouTube channel.

Traveling Exhibit: All for You

The Office of the Bicentennial’s traveling exhibit explored the impact that Indiana University has had on the state of Indiana. The exhibit’s four sections included IU’s collections, historical images, and interactive touch screens featuring videos that feature all IU campuses.

- IU is All Around: details how the people, ideas, and innovations of IU are part of the fabric of Indiana.
- IU is Knowledge: delves into how IU has shaped our understanding in the areas of medicine, health, human behavior, education, astronomy, and natural sciences.
- IU is Community: highlights how IU campuses have been central places for citizens to come together to embrace their favorite teams, take in world class arts, learn about history and culture, and be part of one community.
- IU Serves You: explores IU’s economic impact on Indiana and how it affects the state and the world, including an interactive map that shows the economic and educational investments that IU has made in each county in the state. This map is powered by data gathered for a new IU Impact website (impact.iu.edu), a collaboration with the Vice President for Engagement and IU Alumni Association.

Image 32: The Bicentennial's traveling exhibit, All for You, made its debut in Bloomington during the 200 Festival in September 2019

The bus also contains 3D print model replicas of Showalter Fountain, a Megalonyx jeffersonii fossil, and the Old Oaken Bucket. Virtual reality experiences include tours of IU’s campuses and unique places where IU conducts research, such as an underwater shipwreck. The bus includes 58 graphical images, 62 videos, 48 artifacts, 12 virtual reality experiences, and 1 detailed state map of Indiana.

Bicentennial Project Manager Jeremy Hackerd partnered with various collection managers at IU and Heather Calloway and Brian Woodman from the Office of University Collections to select items to be included in the exhibit. Fleet Services acquired a used recreation vehicle that was outfitted with the exhibit. The Office worked with HealyKohler Design and IU Studios to craft the exhibit's layout and design. 1220 Exhibits Inc. manufactured and installed the design. From September 2019 through November 2019, the exhibit made 14 appearances in eight counties, engaging 2,518 individuals. Unfortunately, fifteen scheduled appearances were canceled due to COVID-19. The positive reception that the exhibit acts as a proof of concept that IU can engage communities throughout the state in new and unique ways. The exhibit was sponsored in part by Herff-Jones and Coca-Cola.

Virtual Bicentennial Bus

The Advanced Visualization Laboratory (AVL) at IUB produced a 3D Matterport scan of the traveling exhibit, creating a virtual tour of the exhibit that can be accessed online. This 3D model launched when the physical exhibit began touring Indiana in September 2019. After COVID-19 caused the cancellation of further stops by the traveling exhibit, the AVL added an interactive component to the scan, allowing viewers to click on images and artifacts to learn more about them and to access many of the videos that were featured on the bus. A total of 1,630 people have viewed the virtual exhibit, visiting the site 2,183 times.

Canceled Visits Due to COVID-19

Additional visits to Jasper County Library, Clinton Public Library, Brownsburg Public Library, Syracuse Wawasee History Museum, IU South Bend Bicentennial Celebration, IU South Bend Elkhart Center, Lebanon High School, Montezuma Public Library, Fairmount Public Library, Tell City Jr.-Sr. High School, First Friday Kokomo Downtown District, Monticello-Union Township Public Library, Owen County Public Library, Bedford Public Library, and Jackson County Public Library were all canceled due to COVID-19.

CitizIN

To leverage Indiana University's resources to the benefit of the state's students, the Office of the Bicentennial partnered with the IU Center on Representative Government and Full Half Nelson designers to create the CitizIN app. CitizIN is a free, interactive learning app about the history, government, geography, economics, and people of Indiana. Content for the app was developed by partners across Indiana, including Indiana University, Indiana Historical Bureau, Indiana Historical Society, and the Geography Educators' Network of Indiana.

The app is designed to support the new Indiana studies courses that are taught in Indiana’s high schools after the passage of Senate Enrolled Act 29 in 2017. Teachers use the app to incorporate primary sources, games, and quizzes into their curriculum.

The app features six modules:

- Unit 1: Territory to Early Statehood
- Unit 2: The Civil War
- Unit 3: Industrialization
- Unit 4: World Wars & the Great Depression
- Unit 5: Turbulent Post-War Years
- Unit 6: Hoosiers in the 21st Century

Image 34: To highlight its connection to the state, the CitizIN logo features, the Say's Firefly, Indiana's official state insect Indiana University launched the app at the 2019 Annual Conference of the Indiana Council for the Social Studies on November 15, 2019 at IUPUI. Approximately 200 K-12 educators, pre-service teachers, and university faculty were in attendance. Along with the launch, the Center on Representative Government sent boxes to high schools throughout the state to promote the app. The boxes included a letter from President McRobbie, a copy of Hoosiers: A New History of Indiana, by Professor Emeritus James Madison, information about the app, and IU Bicentennial items.

In support of the app, the Center on Representative Government planned events in spring and summer 2020 to provide in-person training for Indiana’s high school teachers. Due to COVID-19, the center canceled these events. In their place, the Center conducted three training sessions via Zoom, including a 3-day training with the Geography Educators Network of Indiana, a 2-hour training session at the 2020 Annual Meeting of the Indiana Council for the Social Studies, and a 2-hour training for pre-service social studies teachers at IU Southeast.

Since November 2019, there have been 1,568 unique app downloads, 1,519 unique website users, 2,297 website sessions, 6,214 page views, and 503 YouTube views.

Faculty Research Day

The Office of the Bicentennial and the Office of the Vice President for Research coordinated events on each campus to highlight important faculty research and creative activity. Held in September 2019 as part of the IU Bicentennial's 200 Festival, these events provided opportunities for students, staff, faculty, alumni, and the public to engage with faculty members in a unique setting.

Speakers cut across numerous disciplines, from biology and psychology to arts and education. Talks were given by 106 faculty members as part of this program to approximately 985 attendees. These events allowed the 200 Festival to shine a spotlight on the present by focusing on the important work that faculty do that impacts their local communities, state, nation, and world.

Academic and Extracurricular Innovations

Grand Expedition

The Grand Expedition program was based on Indiana University’s “summer tramps” held during the 1880s representing some of the earliest examples of overseas studies programs in the United States.

Image 36: IU Outdoor Adventures developed three trips that were part of the Grand Expedition, including a trip to the French Alps

Summer tramps were co-educational trips through Europe for IU students and faculty members that combined scientific as well as cultural studies. To honor this historic IU strength, the IU Alumni Association, Office of Overseas Study, IU Outdoor Adventures, and Office of International Partnerships developed a three-part program consisting of for-credit courses, alumni events, and outdoor exploration. In addition to these three programs, two receptions were scheduled to facilitate gatherings of US-based alumni, European-based alumni, and students who participated in the courses and outdoor experiences. The Office of the Bicentennial provided funding to reduce the overall cost for IU students. Unfortunately, due to COVID-19, the Grand Expedition was canceled but the program could be rescheduled in the future if travel restrictions are lifted. Credit for the development of this program is owed to Jeremy Hackerd, Kathy Sideli, Shawn Reynolds, and Bill Bennett along with the faculty members who offered courses and the IU Outdoor Adventures staff members.

Courses

In partnership with the Office of Overseas Study, the Office of the Bicentennial issued a call for course proposals for the Grand Expedition. Eight courses were developed for the program and each incorporated countries and locations that were part of IU’s 1885 summer tramp program. Courses were offered by faculty members from IUB, IUE, IUK, and IUS and covered history, psychology, chemistry, religious studies, environmental policy, and sociology. The courses were scheduled to visit England, France, Germany, Italy, Norway, Scotland, Switzerland, and Vatican City.

Alumni Tours

Image 37: The IU Alumni Association offered two trips that were part of the Grand Expedition

The Indiana University Alumni Association Travel office crafted two trips as part of the Grand Expedition. The trips provided alumni with a mix of preplanned activities coordinated by the IUAA and offered time for participants to explore the countries on their own. Both alumni trips sold out before they had to be canceled due to COVID-19. The two trip themes were: following in the footsteps of Ernie Pyle's coverage in World War II and the African American influence on the jazz scene in France. The trips were scheduled to visit England and France.

IU Outdoor Adventures created three trips in partnership with Alpenglow Education, who conducted scouting trips that greatly informed the itineraries and provided IU Alumni Curt Davidson and Ellen Henderson as instructors. The trips featured mountaineering, hiking, and kayaking in Austria, France, and Switzerland.

Time Capsules

To denote the Bicentennial Era at Indiana University, each campus organized the collection of items to be placed in time capsules and buried in prominent campus locations. The time capsules should be opened during IU's tricentennial celebration in 2120. To select items for the campus time capsules, community members were invited to submit suggestions for capsule items (419 suggestions were received) and campus committees made recommendations to the campus chancellors and provost for final time capsule items.

Angel Nathan, assistant project manager for the IU Bicentennial, coordinated with the campuses and the Office of the Vice President for Capital Planning and Facilities to dedicate and bury all campus time capsules on IU Day, April 23, 2020. Due to COVID-19, the installations and burials of the time capsules were canceled. Instead, each campus archive will keep the campus time capsule and in some cases will use the items in curated displays.

Expansion of Traditions and Cultures Courses

In order to expand the collective understanding of IU's past, the Office of the Bicentennial encouraged the development of courses dealing with any aspect of Indiana University's history and heritage. Incentives were provided in the form of modest course development grants and Campus Historians were available for consultation. A total of five courses were developed, three online and two traditional. Total enrollments among these courses exceeded 750 students.

IU History: Campuses & Context, a non-credit offering publicly available through the IU Expand portal, provides basic information about the institutional history of Indiana University and a historical survey of the nine existing statewide campus sites. It was created by Professor James Capshew and Bicentennial Graduate Assistant Bre Anne Briskey, with the assistance of campus historians and archivists.

IU East Campus History, a non-credit offering publicly available through the IU Expand portal, supplies a picture of the historical evolution of the IU East campus, with information about its academic programs, leadership, and student life. It was produced by IU East Archivist Beth South and Bicentennial Intern Hannah Castor.

COLL X112: Traditions and Cultures of Indiana University is a for-credit online offering from the College of Arts and Sciences at IU Bloomington. Created in 2000 by Professors Thomas Gieryn and James Capshew and updated in 2019-2020 by Professor Carl Weinberg, it highlights the people, places, and programs that supply IUB's distinctive character.

HIST J495: The History of IU South Bend 1916-2017 was a senior seminar that explored the history of IU South Bend. Developed and taught by IUSB Professor Lisa Zwicker, the class produced several research papers on various topics.

HIST A363: Hoosier Nation, Indiana in American History integrates the history of Indiana University within the context of Indiana state history. Created by IUPUI Senior Lecturer of History Anita Morgan, the course illustrates the importance of IU in the state's educational and cultural development.

Recognition Programs

Bicentennial Medal

Many organizations create special recognitions to coincide with major anniversaries. For example, the State of Indiana created a bicentennial medal to mark its 200th anniversary in 2016. Following in this tradition, President McRobbie approved the creation of a new honor, the Indiana University Bicentennial Medal. The medal was awarded to organizations and individuals who, through their personal, professional, artistic, or philanthropic efforts, broadened the reach of Indiana University around the state, nation, and world. The medal honors distinguished and distinctive service, broadly defined, in support of Indiana University's mission as a public university.

The Office of the Bicentennial designed and administered a public competition to design the medal's featured artwork, a process that was chaired by Trustee MaryEllen Bishop. The selection committee comprised of students, faculty, staff, and alumni selected the winning design from IU Eskenazi School of Art, Architecture + Design Professor Jeeyea Kim.

Image 38: The Bicentennial Medal was designed by Professor Jeeyea Kim

The concept of the obverse side of the medal manifests in two images: a rippling effect on the surface of a body of water that represents the strong influence of IU's campuses and centers as well as aviation routes that link to all of the important gateways of the world. Different sized circles and their intersections where IU has academic and medical campuses in the state, indicate the collaborative relationship among IU's campuses and connection to the wider world. The reverse side of the medal features the seal of Indiana University.

Indiana Metal Craft, a company based in Bloomington, IN, worked with Professor Kim to take her design and make it a reality. The manufacturing process is described in Making of the Bicentennial Medal, a video available on the Bicentennial YouTube channel and on the Bicentennial website. President McRobbie presented the first Bicentennial Medal to Indiana Governor Eric Holcomb in June 2019 to help inaugurate IU's Bicentennial Celebratory Year.

The medals themselves are unique, forged from materials salvaged from the old bells which hung in the Student Building on the IU Bloomington campus before a fire left them unusable. This material composition means that recipients receive a lasting piece of IU history. A complete listing of Bicentennial Medal recipients is on the University Honors and Awards website and in the University

Archives. We are grateful to President McRobbie for designating Well House Society funding to support this project.

Honorary Alumni Designation

For many years, there have been individuals who, although not graduates of Indiana University, display a passionate commitment to IU equal to her best graduates. In honor of the IU Bicentennial, the IU Alumni Association developed an Honorary Alumni award, to be given rarely, but at the discretion of the IUAA President and CEO, in recognition of those individuals who are not formally alumni of the university, but who are worthy of the designation “alumni.” Procedures for consideration of the Honorary Alumni designation have been developed by the IUAA Board of Managers in consultation with the IUAA President and CEO. To date, five individuals have been recognized with this special award. In IU’s Third Century, these honorary alumni will further expand the reach of Indiana University and their support will continue to make a tangible difference on all IU campuses.

Bicentennial Scholarships

The Bicentennial Steering Committee made a specific recommendation related to For All: The Bicentennial Campaign for Indiana University: that the focus on student scholarships should be paramount and that “bicentennial” scholarships should be creatively used during the Bicentennial era. The For All campaign donors answered this call resoundingly with the creation of 5,807 new student scholarships and fellowships. The IU Bloomington Office of Scholarships created the Indiana County Bicentennial Scholarship in 2016 to attract students from select Indiana counties which typically do not enroll a large number of students at IU Bloomington. Qualifying students from these select counties receive an annual $2,500 scholarship (for four years). The IU School of Medicine launched a Bicentennial Scholars program in the Fall 2020 semester by selecting 11 students to receive four-year scholarships and to be included in a leadership development program involving the school’s top executives and most esteemed faculty. The IUSM Bicentennial Scholars begin their medical school experience while IU begins its Third Century, and these Scholars represent the best of the future of Indiana University and the IU School of Medicine. The IUSM Bicentennial Scholar program is valued at approximately $150,000 for each student.

Deviations from Steering Committee Recommendations

The IU Bicentennial staff decided, after feasibility studies, cost reviews, and other program opportunities, to make a few changes to the original recommendations on Signature Projects proposed by the Bicentennial Steering Committee. The list of projects described above was the final adopted list of Signature Projects but several other suggested programs did not make the final list. First, for cost reasons, we decided in Fall 2019 to not host a Bicentennial Race. This project was built on the concept of teams visiting each IU campus and engaging in trivia and other competitive activities. The idea was met with great enthusiasm from excellent student committees on each campus who developed fantastic ideas for the event, but unfortunately the costs to host the events far exceeded our budget. It was meant to be held in conjunction with IU Day 2020, which was canceled due to COVID-19, so in the end, the Bicentennial Race would not have been held anyway.

The Steering Committee called for two separate programs on Political Engagement in 2020 (anticipating it would be a presidential election year) and a K-12 Outreach Program. Through the creative and innovative development of the CitizIN app, the Steering Committee’s original intention of a politically minded (in this case, civic education), program for a school-aged audience was delivered by combining these two project ideas. This also proved cost-effective and was easily managed through one partner organization. See above for further discussion of the impact of the CitizIN app.

The Steering Committee called for a Service Program to develop into a Signature Project. However, after receiving multiple service-oriented proposals submitted through the Bicentennial Grant programs, we determined that a Signature Project focused on service would be duplicative and would potentially compete with the grant-funded projects. The funds originally allocated for a central service project were reallocated to those grant-funded projects, allowing us to fund more programs developed by university units.

“Opening IU publications to the world” was a proposed public-facing outreach program. All of the IU campus archives had been working on this goal already by 2016—digitizing university content and making it publicly accessible—so the objective was accomplished through these means rather than as a separate Signature Project.

And, finally, the Bicentennial Steering Committee suggested that the program should have a Signature Project focused on Student Engagement. This became more of a program principle rather than a project itself. Nearly every grant-funded project included students. The Bicentennial office employed more than 150 student interns and hourly staff members. And student engagement was a prime consideration of our event planning, choices of lecture speakers, and in other program decisions. We feel we accomplished the Steering Committee’s objective for student engagement without creating a separate Signature Project.

Chapter 5: Funded Projects

Conference Sponsorships

The Office of the Bicentennial supported a conference sponsorship program to encourage important national and international academic and professional organizations to host their annual meetings on Indiana University campuses. By attracting these conferences to IU, associated units could highlight IU's historic influence in relevant fields, emphasize the current work of faculty and staff, provide outstanding opportunities for students to meet with influential people in their field of study, and directly impact local economies around the state. In total, 30 conferences were supported with Bicentennial conference sponsorships, attracting 19,839 attendees from 401 universities and organizations and from 44 countries around the world.

Project and Course Development Grants

The Project Grant Program and Course Development Grant Program, both managed by Bicentennial Project Manager Jeremy Hackerd, provided opportunities for individuals and units on all IU campuses and outside partners to develop unique programs that addressed Bicentennial goals and objectives. The project grants allowed applicants to secure funding for projects that were not centrally administered, thus broadening the depth and breadth of bicentennial programming and empowering units to provide their own unique take on IU's 200th anniversary.

The Course Development Grant Program encouraged the intellectual exploration of topics related to Bicentennial goals and principles. To facilitate this exploration, the Office of the Bicentennial offered course development grants to faculty and staff. Five campuses offered courses developed via this program.

Projects related to IU's historic homes were funded in part by the IU Preservation Society Fund.

These two grant programs funded 79 projects in total on 8 IU campuses (IUB, IUE, IUK, IUN, IUPUC, IUPUI, IUS, IUSB), across 62 IU departments. Total IU Bicentennial funding was $729,387 which leveraged $711,916 additional funding from partners toward these projects. Projects marked with * were negatively impacted by COVID-19 and were either canceled or altered.

Other Funded Programs

Throughout the Anniversary Era (2016-2019) and Bicentennial Celebratory Year (2019-2020), the Office of the Bicentennial supported several other artistic and cultural endeavors at IU and with community organizations. The funding increased the visibility of the IU Bicentennial.

The IU Bicentennial was a season sponsor for the 2019-2020 year for the IU Auditorium, IU Department of Theatre, Drama, and Contemporary Dance, and IU Cinema. Bicentennial funding, and Well House Society funding, supported the revival of the Jacobs School of Music's venerable tradition of producing Parsifal in November 2019. Funding provided to the Black Film Center/Archive, National Service Archive, and Sage Collection helped those units document their holdings which could then be used for future projects and promotion. A sponsorship for National History Day at the Indiana History Center in Indianapolis supported a research competition for school-aged children to research and present a topic related to Indiana University's history. For a list of all programs funded by the Bicentennial, see the University Archives.

Other Departmental Programs

Many units within the university developed their own programs and activities inspired by the IU Bicentennial. For example, the IU Alumni Association completed a Bicentennial Alumni Census project, the IU Bloomington campus produced a four-year documentary "IU 2020" which followed 12 students through their four-year college experience through graduation in 2020, all IU Bloomington athletic teams wore special uniform patches honoring the university's 200th anniversary, and many many more examples can be found throughout the university.

Chapter 6: Bicentennial Student Engagement

The Bicentennial Steering Committee report challenged the Bicentennial staff to engage with students in a variety of ways. The report called on the staff to:

“Make a concerted effort to include students in the planning and execution of events and programs, through academic programs or short-term staffing.”

“A student internship program should be developed by the staff in the Bicentennial Office to engage students across all campuses in planning and execution of projects and in academic research experiences.”

Additionally, the Steering Committee, with the assistance of Presidential Intern and IUPUI student Elizabeth Cotter, conducted student focus groups on each campus to solicit ideas and suggestions from students for future student involvement in the Bicentennial program. Those suggestions were summarized in the Bicentennial Steering Committee report.

Chapter Three describes the role that students played in marketing and communication efforts, specifically in the social media management of program communications and as recipients of promotional products raising awareness of the Bicentennial program. Chapters Four and Five of this report summarize many areas where student engagement was paramount in signature projects and other funded projects, including the significant investment in student employees in the Oral History Project and Archives Development and Deployment Project and the academic engagement in new courses (e.g. Traditions and Cultures courses; the For the Love of IU design course) and experiential opportunities (e.g. archaeological digs at IU South Bend and Wylie House and virtual- and augmented-reality grant participants). In addition to these activities, and consistent with the Steering Committee recommendations, several opportunities for student employment and a special May 2020 Commemorative Commencement Poster project were developed.

Student Interns and Employees

Mission, Goals, and Planning

The IU Bicentennial offered a wide variety of internship and employment opportunities for IU students, on all IU campuses, at all levels of study, and from any discipline. Bicentennial Interns focused either on project leadership or on independent research; graduate assistants contributed to multiple signature projects, communication and marketing efforts, and events; and hourly employees of the oral history project transcribed and edited thousands of hours of oral history interviews. For a complete list of the 157 student employees in the Office of the Bicentennial see Appendix B. Each intern worked with Bicentennial project supervisors and campus and community mentors. Internships were typically one semester long and students worked at least 10 hours per week (150 hours minimum). Internships were paid and provided the IU Bicentennial with content and program development while providing the interns with personal and professional experience. In total, more than $500,000 was invested in student staff compensation. This program was supported in part by the Presidential Student Internship Program endowment.

Presentations, Blogs, Timelines, and Websites

The contributions to the overall Bicentennial program from student staff members cannot be overstated. Students authored 141 blog posts; presented more than 70 talks at conferences, meetings, and events; authored 14 published articles; developed 23 interactive timelines; recorded six podcasts; and discovered thousands of facts, figures, and stories from campus archival collections around the state. All of the content and background research materials developed by Bicentennial interns will be saved at the IU Archives and is available on the 200.iu.edu website for review.

History provides a precedent. By journeying through archives, perusing historical texts, or experiencing the latest exhibit at a museum, one can discover a place of belonging among the past. For LGBTQ+ individuals, an understanding of queer history is vital. Often faced with marginalization and discrimination, the queer community can turn to history for support and confirmation of their identities, as well as to learn of contributions made by those like them.

Student Grant Program

During the Bicentennial Celebratory Year, the Office of the Bicentennial in conjunction with the Student Involvement and Leadership Center in the Division of Student Affairs at IU Bloomington announced the creation of the Bicentennial Student Grant Program (BSGP). BSGP offered small grants of up to $1,000 to support bicentennial-related projects by registered graduate and undergraduate student organizations on any Indiana University campus. Unfortunately, due to COVID-19, several of the approved programs were canceled.

Chapter 7: Council of University Historians

University Historian

In anticipation of Indiana University's Bicentennial, President McRobbie created the position of University Historian and appointed Professor James Capshew as the inaugural historian in 2015. This appointment was for six years, concluding in 2021. The president tasked the university historian with the following:

- Coordinating the historical research for all aspects of the IU Bicentennial as an information agent for faculty, staff, students, administration, alumni, and members of the general public and media on queries related to the institution's past and its multifaceted historical role, providing the best available information and consistent quality control;
- Counseling and collaborating with all campuses, schools, departments, and local communities across the diverse timelines of IU campuses and other units as well as state and local anniversaries; convening a Council of University Historians for ongoing collaboration, policy development, and best practice related to IU's historical identity going forward;
- Developing and redesigning where necessary curricular components for students on every IU campus to participate academically with the university's history;
- Constructing a university historical marker campaign across each campus as physical representations of the university's past at key IU heritage sites, on campus and off campus as needed;
- Publishing, and coordinating the publication of, edited works, essays, blogs, and an IU dictionary-encyclopedia that collectively engage broad constituencies in their development and consumption.

As the Bicentennial program developed and evolved from 2016 to 2020, the role of the University Historian also developed and evolved. Here is a sampling of the university historian's activities from 2016 to 2020:

- Participated in hiring and direction of Bicentennial staff members,
- Served as ex officio on the Bicentennial Steering Committee,
- Supervised four graduate research assistants, directing their research activities,
- Supervised 15 undergraduate research interns, directing their research activities, and reviewing, for various publications, their research products,
- Created and chaired the Council of University Historians,
- Developed a new IU Expand course on the history of Indiana University—the first course with a university-wide scope,
- Contributed historical articles and was part of the editorial review team for 200: The Bicentennial Magazine,
- Edited dozens of Bicentennial Minutes video scripts, and several additional video scripts for Bicentennial program content,
- Created and directed the IU Historical Marker program including 63 nominations, 21 approved IU markers, five State of Indiana markers,
- Presented 40+ invited talks to alumni, faculty, staff, and students,
- Reviewed and edited several Well House Series publications on the history of Indiana University,

- Created the Bicentennial Bites lunch club, which convened four times to discuss ongoing research activities related to IU history and to build a community of scholars on the topic,
- Conducted a few oral history interviews for the Bicentennial Oral History Project,
- Produced a book manuscript on IU history (still in progress),
- Presented twelve Bicentennial Medals on behalf of the university, and
- Served as ex officio on Jordan Review Committee in July-August 2020, and as ex officio on campus building names review committees, 2020-2021.

Campus Historians

In addition to the university historian, the campuses appointed individuals to serve as campus historians. The campus historians were charged with campus historical project coordination, and with coordinating on behalf of their campuses with other Bicentennial projects and events. The campuses also engaged these historians regarding matters concerning their own histories and anniversaries. The campus historians are listed in Appendix B.

Council of University Historians

The Council of University Historians consisted of the seven campus historians and the university historian served as the chair. This council facilitated inter-campus communication about IU history and heritage, encouraged best practices, and promoted historical consciousness in every corner of the university. The council's organizational meeting occurred in December 2015 at IUPUI and it held regular quarterly meetings (in-person and virtual) throughout the Bicentennial era. Due to the significant overlap in campus archivists appointed to serve also as campus historians, much of the agenda of the Council was shaped with archival projects in the foreground.

Summary of Activities

- Developed campus history committees (example: IUB committee provided input into Well House Series book topics, the history of race relations on campus, and developed proposed elements for the Wright Quad mural honoring IU history 1998-2020),
- Coordinated campus participation in the Bicentennial Oral History Project (example: IU Southeast expanded a campus/regional oral history project to collaborate with the bicentennial project team),
- Coordinated campus participation in Time Capsule project,
- Coordinated campus archives' engagement in the Archives Development and Deployment Project (example: IU South Bend digitized thousands of photographs),
- Coordinated campus materials for Bicentennial Minutes video series,
- Reviewed and consulted on new Records Retention Policy,
- Reviewed and consulted on proposal for State Archive to be housed at IUPUI,
- Consulted on the proposed Museum of IU as it relates to historical content, exhibition, and university-wide use,
- Identified priority historical attributes for campus alumni relations research/coding in alumni records (example, IU East prioritized the identification of former campus athletes as a group of alumni they wanted to reach but could not without research and proper updating to databases),
- Contributed to digital records preservation and access discussions within MDPI Initiative,
- Identified campus priorities for Bicentennial projects and leveraged projects with multiple campus interest,

- Developed relationships with local and county historical societies and museums for Bicentennial projects and future campus needs,
- Developed historically-sound suggestions for possible honorary naming opportunities, and
- Collaborated with campus anniversary planning to coordinate with Bicentennial (examples: IUSB Jubilee in 2016-2017, IUPUI 50th in 2019).

With the aid of the University Historian, Campus Historians, and the Council of University Historians, the role of history in the ongoing life of Indiana University was brightly illuminated to a broad range of audiences. The Bicentennial program has proven the value of understanding, preserving, and commemorating the university's rich past, and a shared history provides opportunities for engagement and discussion of future directions by the university community. Additionally, the development of a community of practice surrounding IU history and heritage was a deliberate goal that was met successfully.

Chapter 8: Bicentennial Marquee Events

Although events were a constant presence in the Bicentennial program between 2016 and 2020 (see Appendix A for master events listing), the Bicentennial Celebratory Year was designed with special Marquee Events that intentionally highlighted different projects and focused on different audiences to showcase the multi-dimensional nature of the program. All Bicentennial events were coordinated by Lynn Waugh with assistance and collaboration of colleagues in the Office of University Events. The overall plan for the Marquee Events calendar was:

- IU Homecoming (October 2019)
- Day of Commemoration: MLK, Jr. Day and IU's 200th Anniversary (January 2020)
- IU Day (April 2020)
- Bicentennial Alumni Reunion and Bicentennial Celebration (June 2020)

And, as summarized in Chapter Four, the Bicentennial Alumni Reunion and Bicentennial Celebration were canceled due to COVID-19.

200 Festival

Faculty Research Day

Faculty Research Day was a Bicentennial Signature Project and is summarized in Chapter Four. The IU Bicentennial partnered with the Office of the Vice President for Research to present faculty research showcase events on each campus. Coordinated by Lisa Fukuda, each campus took a slightly different approach to the event but 106 faculty members gave talks as part of this program. Attendance: 985

Well House Series Book Launch

The Well House Series was part of the Bicentennial Publication and Media Series signature project summarized in Chapter Four. For this special event, the Office of the Bicentennial partnered with IU Press to launch three new books (The Lilly Library from A to Z by Darlene J. Sadlier; The Spirit of Generosity by Curtis R Simic and Sandra Bate; Indiana University and the World by Patrick O'Meara with Leah K. Peck) as part of the Well House Book Series. The program for this event started with opening remarks by Carolyn Walters (Ruth Lilly Dean of University Libraries), introductions of speakers by President McRobbie, and comments by authors Patrick O'Meara, Darlene Sadlier, and Curtis Simic. After the speaking program, the three books were available for sale by the IU Press and authors signed copies while attendees enjoyed a reception with light hors d'oeuvres. Attendance: 115

Higher Education Symposium: Provocations

This Signature Project is described in more detail in Chapter Four. The focus of this day-long symposium was Provocations: Conversations Towards a Bold University in the 21st Century. The day began with introductions and refreshments followed by session one, "Our Universities, Ourselves: Institution and Identities" lead by David Staley, Ohio State University, author of Alternative Universities: Speculative Design for Innovation in Higher Education, with Eric Bain-Selbo, Dean, School of Humanities and Social Sciences, IU Kokomo. After IU catering served the attendees lunch, session two, "Colleges and Universities: Institutions of Investment, Debt, and Indebtedness" began with Brian Gilley, Professor of Anthropology, IU Bloomington, and Colin Johnson, Associate Professor of Gender Studies, IU Bloomington. The symposium concluded with the final session, "The Civic University: Democracy, Community, and Governance" with Michelle Moyd, Ruth N. Halls Associate Professor of History and Associate Director of the Center for Research on Race and Ethnicity in Society, IU Bloomington, and Heather Akou, Associate Professor, Co-Area Coordinator of Fashion Design; Director, Sage Collection, IU Bloomington. Indiana University in Service to the Nation: The National Service Archive at IUPUI

Indiana University President Michael McRobbie and Executive Vice President and IUPUI Chancellor Nasser Paydar hosted the opening event launching a new repository in the Ruth Lilly Special Collections at IUPUI: The National Service Archive. Developed in recognition of IUPUI's and IU's historic strengths in community service and in graduating thousands of civil servants who have joined the national service movement, the launch included panelists:

The event concluded with a moving tribute to service as 20 new AmeriCorps members took the oath of service to begin their work. Attendees enjoyed a reception of light hors d'oeuvres. Attendance: 110

Collections and Heritage Showcase

Image 48: The Collections Showcase opened IU's collections to attendees

The expo-style event highlighted faculty and staff from all campuses, allowing them to demonstrate how they have provided world-wide access to IU's extensive collections. The Collections Showcase had thirteen exhibitor booths giving visitors the opportunity to experience some of the following: the augmented reality application called Virtual Indiana University, watch digitized film reels and see the process behind the digitization, investigate the Indiana Geological and Water Survey's newly accessible collections through 3-D digitization and virtual reality, and listen to and search IU Bicentennial Oral Histories for the first time online. Faculty and students also had the chance to learn what collection materials are accessible and how to utilize them for teaching and research. IU Catering provided a light brunch, and the Office of the Bicentennial gave away promotional items. Participant feedback on this event applauded the ability of IU staff and faculty members to present directly to President McRobbie, Provost, Robel, Dean of IU Libraries Carolyn Walters, trustees, several vice presidents, and student visitors. Advancement staff members also sent appreciation for the opportunity to show-off IU's collections with major donors and supporters of the university. Attendance: 150

Trustees and Officers of IU Dinner

This event provided the opportunity to thank trustees and senior administrators of the university and celebrate the book launch of the third volume of Trustees & Officers of Indiana University. The evening began with a reception with light hors d'oeuvres and the special 1820 Bicentennial wine collection in the Solarium and then a formal four-course sit-down meal in Alumni Hall. After dinner, a program began with remarks from President McRobbie. Trustee Michael Mirro then presented a parchment of service recognition to Zachary Arnold, and Dr. Philip Eskew, Jr. After the parchment presentation Sue Talbot and Steve Ferguson joined Trustee Mirro to present President McRobbie with a Bicentennial Medal on behalf of his distinguished service to Indiana University. President McRobbie and Trustee Mirro then individually presented Bicentennial Medals to former trustees, former vice presidents and chancellors, first ladies, as well as current and former secretaries and treasurers of the board that were present at the dinner. The evening concluded with Dean Emeritus Charles Webb playing the alma mater on the Ehrlich-Webb Great Organ and the distribution of the Trustees & Officers book to everyone who attended. Attendance: 110

Bicentennial Ceremony

Eager audience members waiting for the Ceremony to begin were treated to two videos. First, a collection of raw archival footage recently digitized in the Media Digitization and Preservation Initiative (MDPI) was shown, followed by a curated 3-minute IU history video developed especially for debut at the Bicentennial Ceremony.

Delegates representing various institutions, faculty, and members of the platform party started the ceremony with a processional that began from the west side of the Showalter Fountain into the IU Auditorium. President McRobbie served as emcee for this event and gave bicentennial remarks. This celebratory event also included comments from Lieutenant-Governor Suzanne Crouch, Karen Freeman-Wilson (Mayor, City of Gary),

Image 51: The Bicentennial Ceremony at IU Auditorium

John Hamilton (Mayor, City of Bloomington), Chairman of the Board of Trustees Michael Mirro, IU Bloomington Provost Lauren Robel, IUPUI Chancellor Nasser Paydar, and IU Kokomo Chancellor Sue Sciame-Giesecke. IU student trustee Molly Connor and IU School of Medicine Professor Rafat Abonour gave remarks on behalf of the students and faculty; Congresswoman Susan Brooks and actress Tan Kheng Hua gave remarks on behalf of the alumni; and Cindy Simon Skjodt spoke for the IU Foundation.

This special ceremony included several musical numbers from the Herald Trumpeters who opened the ceremony and Distinguished Professor Timothy Noble offering the national anthem. The IU Philharmonic Orchestra, under the baton of Professor Arthur Fagen, performed a glorious rendition of Wagner's Overture to Mastersingers of Nuremberg which was met with a lengthy standing ovation. Global acapella sensation, Straight No Chaser debuted their original song written in honor of the university's 200th anniversary, and the event concluded with the Alma Mater led by Distinguished Professor Marietta Simpson and the Singing Hoosiers. To commemorate this day, each attendee was given a special bicentennial coin. Audience surveys revealed an overwhelming satisfaction with the event, the speakers, the pomp and circumstance, and the musical performances. Attendance: 2,101

Outdoor Festival

Image 53: The Outdoor Festival featured the World's Largest Bounce House

The Office of the Bicentennial planned this festival specifically for IU students, although the activities were open to the community, faculty, and staff. The big attraction of this event was the co-sponsorship with the Indiana University Union Board to host the World's Largest Bounce House which boasted more than 10,000 square feet of bouncing fun. Indiana University was the first campus to host the world's largest bounce house and more than 850 students and community members attended. The Office of the Bicentennial partnered with IU Athletics to open Assembly Hall and allow people access to the court for a shoot-around and photo opportunities while IU's away football game aired live on the big screens. Musical performances by the band Fat Pockets and a live DJ (DJ Maddog) were also part of this celebration. Kona Ice, Chocolate Moose, and Wagon Wheel food trucks were available for attendees to purchase food, and free popcorn, cookies, and waters were provided. The Bicentennial Traveling Exhibit was also part of this event, with opportunities for people to tour the bus and learn more about our 200-year history. Attendance: 850

Big Red 200 Supercomputer Dedication Ceremony

Big Red 200 is one of the fastest university-owned artificial intelligence supercomputers in the nation and will support Indiana University's advanced research in AI, machine learning, data analytics, and scientific and medical research. The new system is named for the IU Bicentennial and replaces the highly successful Big Red II Cray supercomputer. Big Red 200 is the first of Cray's revolutionary Shasta supercomputers installed at a U.S. university. Held in the lobby/atrium of the Cyberinfrastructure Building (CIB), President McRobbie presided over the ceremony and dedicated the supercomputer. The program included remarks from President McRobbie, Vice President Brad Wheeler, Charles Morreale (Senior Vice President, Field Operations Cray, a Hewlett Packard Enterprise Company), Kay Connelly (Associate Dean for Research, Professor of Informatics), and a video presentation of the Big Red 200. Immediately following the program was a reception and tours of the Big Red 200 coordinated by the CIB staff. Attendance: 475

Metz Bicentennial Grand Carillon Inaugural Ringing

Although January is not the ideal time for an outdoor carillon concert, the recently completed renovation of the Metz Bicentennial Grand Carillon was marked by Jacobs School of Music guest carillonneur John Gouwens with a ceremonial 200-bell ringing. Although a formal concert was not planned, the large crowd that gathered to hear the bell ringing compelled Mr. Gouwens to perform several songs including the Alma Mater. Videos of the inaugural bell ringing were among the most highly viewed on all social media channels for the IU Bicentennial. Attendance: 160

Bicentennial Luncheon

Light and Truth paintings with remarks from artist Bonnie Sklarski who was also awarded a Bicentennial Medal. Next, researchers Gary Motz and Polly Sturgeon from the Indiana Geological and Water Survey offered remarks about Megalonyx jeffersonii. The program moved to the Franklin Hall Commons, where the Megalonyx was on display. The event concluded with a beverage and dessert bar in the Commons area. Attendance: 209

An Afternoon with Viola Davis

Image 57: Viola Davis at Simon Skjodt Assembly Hall

This birthday-themed sit-down luncheon took place in Presidents Hall. The event featured the unveiling of commissioned paintings Lux et Veritas (Light and Truth) by Professor Emerita Bonnie Sklarski and the return of Megalonyx jeffersonii, a digitallly reconstructed skeleton of a giant ground sloth that was once part of IU's natural history collections. After lunch, President McRobbie began the program with welcome remarks. An explanation and video about the making of the Bicentennial Medal and the presentation of a Bicentennial Medal to its designer, Professor Jeeyea Kim and its manufacturer, Ronald Davis (on behalf of Indiana Metal Craft) followed. The President then transitioned to the unveiling of the Tony, Emmy, and Academy Award-winning actress, producer, and philanthropist Viola Davis delivered a keynote lecture as part of a university-wide Day of Commemoration to recognize the Indiana University Bicentennial and Martin Luther King, Jr. Day. This free ticketed event took place at Simon Skjodt Assembly Hall and was open to the public.

The program started with the honorary degree ceremony, including the platform party's procession and remarks made by President McRobbie and James C. Wimbush (Vice President for Diversity, Equity, and Multicultural Affairs and Dean, University Graduate School). After the President awarded Viola

Davis the honorary degree, the African American Choral Ensemble performed. Viola Davis then gave a rousing talk, followed immediately by Q&A featuring questions pre-selected from IU students facilitated by Executive Vice President and Provost Lauren Robel. This event was generously supported by the Frederick R. and Barbara L. Meyer Endowment Fund. Attendance: 6,000

200th Anniversary Dinner

This dinner, held in honor of IU's founding on January 20, 1820, featured the unveiling of the 1998–2020 panels of the Wright Quad murals— depicting the history of IU Bloomington—commissioned from Professor Caleb Weintraub. This was the last event of the day-long 200th Anniversary celebration and began with a reception in the Wright Quad Formal Lounge. Once the attendees were ushered into the dining hall for the sit-down dinner, they took their assigned seats at the tables. After dinner, a short program began with the President introducing the new panels of the Wright Quad murals and a video about the making of the murals.

Image 58: Held in Wright Quad, the 200th Anniversary Dinner was the concluding event for IU's day-long celebration

The artist, Professor Caleb Weintraub, then spoke about the project, and after his remarks, the President awarded him the Bicentennial Medal. Executive Vice President and Provost Lauren Robel followed with remarks. The Singing Hoosiers concluded the evening with the performance of "Happy Birthday" to IU and everyone joined in the singing of the Alma Mater. A life-size birthday cake was on display to commemorate IU's birthday and all the attendees left with a cupcake and signed poster of the new Wright Quad mural. Attendance: 455

Chapter 9: Post-Bicentennial Considerations

As the Bicentennial program timeline outlined, there were three distinct time periods of the commemoration: the Bicentennial Anniversary Era (2016-2019), the Bicentennial Celebratory Year (2019-2020), and Bicentennial Legacy Programs (2020 and beyond). While many ongoing projects will trace their origins to the IU Bicentennial, there are a handful of programs and practices that the Bicentennial staff recommends continue as institutionalized programs beyond 2020.

A “Bicentennial” Program After the Bicentennial

As summarized in Chapter 4, the Beyond Boundaries: Indiana Academies Symposium was postponed to April 9-10, 2021 due to the global pandemic and will be held as a virtual conference. The IU Office of the President will oversee the completion of this project as the only “Bicentennial” program continuing beyond 2020.

Institutionalized Bicentennial Programs

The Bicentennial Oral History Project—its existing collection assets, website, and future planning—have taken up permanent residence in the University Archives. This collection of over 1,200 interviews has been formally accessioned into the university archives records and is available for research and reference. The University Archives, with the assistance of the IUB Library Technologies division, will maintain a web presence including as much digital content from the collection as possible (e.g. transcripts, audio files, and interview information) and it will be incorporated into other library technologies or moved to new websites as needed in the future. Project goals and objectives will evolve under the direction of the University Archives but the value of oral histories to expand the holdings in the university’s historical collection has been proven through the Bicentennial Oral History Project. As the influence of digital environments on faculty and student life become increasingly common, storytelling and personal narration will become even more valuable to fill holes left behind by recordkeeping. We are grateful to the University Archives for their embrace of this project and their commitment to continue it in some form in the future.

Image 60: Bicentennial Oral History Project mark

Image 61: Indiana University Press' Well House Books mark

The Well House Series of the IU Press has been a notable success of the Bicentennial program. With 13 books published and distributed between 2017 and 2020 and at least another dozen in the publication development pipeline, IU Press has signaled its clear commitment to continuing to publish meaningful works related to the people, places, and events of Indiana University’s past, present, and future. We are grateful that the IU Press will continue to publish scholarship about Indiana University. This will be particularly valuable in providing continuity of diverse historical narratives in between formal university anniversaries which will keep readers, alumni, students, faculty, and others engaged with a steady stream of IU-related content.

Recommendations for Continuing Programs

Several programs are recommended for continuation under new management post-Bicentennial. First, the University Historian position has proven invaluable in the development, review, and oversight of publications, historical research, course development, and student work. Considering the growing presence of history in the everyday life of campus activities and activism, it is recommended that a University Historian position be retained by the university. The Bridging the Visibility Gap Project and the IU Historical Marker Program have both proven valuable public history and recognition tools and should be continued, in some form, under the expanded portfolio of the University Honors and Awards initiative in the Office of the President. And, 200: The Bicentennial Magazine has engaged an enthusiastic audience and at the same time filled a gap in publication opportunities for short-form accessible material specifically focused on IU history. Its success has proven that there is both an audience for this kind of material and a community of scholars interested in writing it. We recommend that IU Press and Digital Publishing consider continuing this initiative in an appropriate format. Finally, the 1820 Bicentennial Wine Collection—developed by the IU Alumni Association—was created with a special exception to the university's strict licensing regulations related to alcohol. On the basis of the financial contributions to the IUAA General Scholarship Program from its revenue, and the responsible methods of distribution and marketing deployed, we strongly recommend that this program be permitted to continue and evolve as necessary under the auspices of the IU Alumni Association.

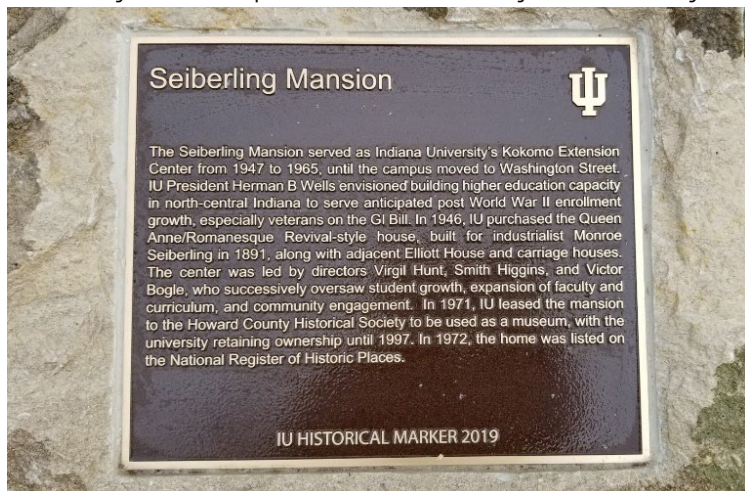

Image 62: The IU historical marker for the Seiberling Mansion, the building that housed the IU Kokomo Extension Center from 1947-1965

Recommendations for Continuing Practices

In addition to the programs mentioned above, some practices emerged in the course of the Bicentennial activities that have proven valuable and should be continued, wherever feasible.

First, communities of practice have emerged among campus historians, campus archivists, public art experts on each campus, etc. Prior to the Bicentennial, these groups had no formal community nor expectation of inter-campus collaboration. We are not suggesting large structures be put in place to continue these practices, but we strongly recommend that the University Historian, University Archivist, and others consider how to encourage and support cross-campus collaboration to further achieve their regular goals and objectives.

Second, for the Bicentennial Traveling Exhibit, an RV was purchased and renovated into a mobile museum complete with museum exhibit lighting, cabinetry and mounts, and digital exhibit equipment. Owned and operated by IU Fleet Services, we strongly recommend that the vehicle become an asset of the University Collections initiative under the direction of Heather Calloway, executive director of university collections and in collaboration with individual collections, Media Digitization and Preservation Initiative, Advanced Visualization Lab, and other interested parties. This valuable public outreach tool can best serve the university in the future by continuing to focus on taking IU on the road directly to cities and towns across the state.

The innovative Grand Expedition program comprised of overseas study courses, IU Alumni Travel programs, and IU Outdoor Adventures trips, should be deployed in the future if possible. Understanding that the global pandemic will have impacts on study abroad and international travel for some time into the future, we realize it may take several years for this program to find the right moment of implementation. But, nevertheless, we hope it will someday bring great benefit to the multiple generations of students and alumni who participate.

The Bicentennial website (200.iu.edu) will continue to house high-level program documentation for reference but will not be updated after December 31, 2020 (except for the Beyond Boundaries conference in April 2021). If the University Historian position continues in the future, historical content can continue to reside on a page of the Bicentennial website. If the University Historian position does

Indiana University: 200 Years in the Making

The Indiana Seminary was founded by the Indiana General Assembly on January 20, 1820. During its inaugural year, the school featured just one teacher who taught Ancient Greek and Latin. The school expanded its curriculum and became Indiana College in 1828 and Indiana University in 1838. January 20,

Image 64: The Bicentennial's website served a portal to learn about events, apply for grants, and read IU history not continue, another home for historical content—perhaps the University Archives—should be explored. IU Bicentennial social media accounts will become “inactive” after December 31, 2020 (again, with the Beyond Boundaries symposium as the sole active exception).

And, finally, the IU Bicentennial staff recommends that the university's next major university-wide commemoration should occur around 2045 in recognition of the 225th anniversary of the founding of Indiana University. Given that “rain locations” was the limit of the bicentennial staff's most elaborate contingency planning, we strongly recommend the 225th anniversary committee consider a global pandemic early in their planning process.

Chapter 10: Conclusion

A tremendous achievement culminated in 2020 as Indiana University reached its Bicentennial. We saw this moment as an opportunity and we celebrated our successes. We reflected on the challenges and difficulties our university has faced in the past. We envisioned what the next century might bring—and what we could accomplish as an institution and a community of learners.

We envisioned our Bicentennial as a chance to enhance our learning—to reflect deeply on where we have been and where we are going. Faculty and students engaged in unique educational experiences through courses and projects that examined our history. The stories of our university were shared through books, exhibits, and artifacts so that others could learn from them. We explored the experiences and knowledge of some of the most influential people in the world—students, faculty, staff, alumni, and friends of IU.

And the world got to know IU better, too. We brought people together on our campuses, developing connections between experts and our university, broadening the reach of IU even further. These connections will help create opportunities for future collaborations. Our statewide campuses have always provided a learning environment that encourages academic, artistic, and personal exploration and growth. We built on that tradition by investing in campus beautification, infrastructure, and collections that will benefit the students of our third century and beyond.

Our Bicentennial commemoration highlighted other historic and signature strengths, including IU's encouragement of global connections and a broad worldview, while remaining appreciative of the state support that has sustained us for two centuries. We continue to value diverse perspectives and cultural experiences. Those perspectives were not always given the prominence they deserved. We used our Bicentennial as a chance to diversify the historical narrative, to lift voices of those who had been subdued. By doing so, we are supporting the expectation of equality for all.

It took the entire Indiana University community, past and present, to get to this moment. We honored our faculty and staff, students and alumni, and treasured guests. We came together in celebration and commemoration because we are all part of the success of our university. That success is shared with the citizens of Indiana, for whom we work hard to be a trusted resource. We created ways for the public to access and engage with IU. We invested in projects that build stronger communities which will in turn develop greater support for our university.

Our Bicentennial year did not end the way we envisioned, but as with other challenges our university has faced, we moved ahead with creativity, innovation, and determination. As we close the book on our last 200 years, we must remember that Indiana University's Bicentennial legacy is not just what we have accomplished but also what we plan to achieve. Indiana University has become—and will continue to be—a center of light and truth for all the world.
